British Tanks Defeat Rommel in France; Dewey and Bricker Nominated by GOP

Convention Picks Ticket On 1st Ballot In 2¼ Hours

Lone MacArthur Vote Only Blot On Unanimity as Warren Bows Out

By Edward T. Folliard

Chicago Stadium, June 28.—Thomas Edward Dewey, 42-year-old Governor of New York, today was nominated for President of the United States in one of the most extraordinary conventions in the history of the Republican Party.

John William Bricker, Governor of Ohio, born in a log cabin 50 years ago, was nominated for Vice President in the same session.

Both nominations came on the first ballot and were carried through in the record-breaking time of two hours and a quarter, which included oratory, parading and all the other traditional antics of a national convention.

The final tally for Dewey was 1056 to 1, the lone holdout being a Wisconsin delegate who cast his vote for Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the hero of Bataan.

Wait on Dewey Speech

Tonight the twenty-third Republican National Convention was assembled for the grand finale, waiting to hear the acceptance speech of Governor Dewey, who took off by plane from Albany as soon as his nomination was confirmed.

The team of "Tom and John," as one of the day's orators dubbed them, make up the first all-governor ticket since Gov. Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey and Gov. Thomas Marshall of Indiana were nominated by the Democratic Party in 1912.

The delegates to the 1944 GOP convention, nearly exhausted from the heat but full of ardor for the political battle that lies ahead, gave a lusty cheer when Gov. Simeon Willis of Kentucky promised that "the two boys from the country, Tom and John, will save this country from its enemies, both foreign and domestic."

Roosevelt Assailed

They cheered again when Mayor James Garfield Stewart of Cincinnati promised that Dewey and Bricker would "make an end to the administration of Sidney Hillman, Earl Browder and Franklin D. Roosevelt."

The way was cleared for the lightning-like nominating session when Governor Bricker, in a dramatic appearance on the stadium platform, withdrew from the battle over the presidential nomination

Nye Continues To Trail Stambaugh

Fargo, N. Dak., June 28 (AP).—Lynn U. Stambaugh, of Fargo, former national commander of the American Legion, tonight continued to lead incumbent Gerald P. Nye for the Republican nomination for United States Senator by the 2500 advantage he held most of the day in returns from Tuesday's State primary.

With 1271 of the State's 2251 precincts reported, Stambaugh had 30,355 as compared to 27,748 for Nye and 22,941 for United States Representative Usher L. Burdick. A fourth candidate, A. C. Townley, was out of the running with but 839.

GOP Gives Sherman, Tex., Day of Pride

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Chicago, June 28.—"Didya ever know Frances Hutt?"

"Sure, I knew her. Orla Hutt's little girl. Oscar Hutt's cousin. Prettier 'n paint she was as a child. Talented, too. She'll do all right if her husband gets to the White House."

I can hear them talking down in Sherman, Tex. I can hear them as plainly as if I were there myself, as I was for so many, many years.

I can hear reminiscences about Frances Eileen Hutt—her childhood capers and her kin—rippling all up and down Travis and Crockett streets and out Grand ave. They're talking about her on the town square, in front of the courthouse, and around the wreathed Confederate monument that is still a focus of civic satisfaction.

Girl Who Made Good

Even though most Shermanites are Democrats (or at least they used to be) they're mighty proud of this hometown girl who made good, the woman who is Mrs. Thomas Dewey, wife of the Republican nominee for the Presidency.

Some day a plaque may mark a neat frame house in the Lone Star town long known as the "Athens of Texas." That house was home to

Dewey Flies To Chicago Convention

Cleveland, June 28 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York nominated today as Republican candidate for President, arrived in Cleveland at 6:06 p. m. (EWT) en route by chartered plane to make his acceptance speech to the Republican National Convention in Chicago.

While the plane was being refueled, Dewey remarked "I am delighted that my first visit since the nomination is to the fine State of my good friend, your very distinguished Gov. John Bricker."

Dewey said that Bricker had made "a great campaign on behalf of Republican Party principles."

He and Mrs. Dewey both appeared fresh and rested.

On 21 Passenger Plane

Albany, N. Y., June 28 (AP).—Beaming with joy, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey streaked toward Chicago by chartered plane late today to accept tonight the Republican nomination for President.

With him on the 21-passenger airliner were his wife, official aides, newspapermen, photographers and bodyguards. They took off at 3:29 p. m. Eastern war time for the four-hour trip to the convention city. A refueling stop was scheduled at Cleveland.

Fisher Questioned

Doctors Lay Cathedral Killing To 'Insane Impulse,' 'Rage'

By Jean Reiff

What one psychiatrist called an "irresistible impulse" and another labeled "rage" was blamed yesterday for the slaying of Catherine Reardon in Washington's Cathedral murder.

Three experts testified before the District Court jury trying Julius Fisher, Negro handyman, for the killing, while the defendant heard his mentality described as that of an 11-year-old child.

At only one point did he display any emotion.

Cross-examined by the Government, Fisher again described the slaying of the librarian, sticking to the story he had been temporarily insane.

Then United States Attorney Edward M. Curran put the following questions to him:

Q. You slapped her didn't you?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. You clubbed her didn't you?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. You strangled her, didn't you?—A. Yes.

Q. Then, you stabbed her with a penknife, didn't you.—A. Yes.

Curran shouted at the witness, "Yet you say you didn't mean to kill her?" Fisher's answer of "No, I did not," was barely audible.

Curran dropped his voice. "You didn't mean to do her any good?" he asked, and the defendant answered, "It doesn't seem so."

Curran also questioned Fisher about what he had done after committing the crime. The defendant told of going home and taking off his blood-stained clothes.

"What did you do with them?" asked Curran.

"I threw them into the closet."

"Did you toss them in?"

"Yes."

"Then what did you do?"

"I went to bed. I was tired. I had a dream about an argument I had had. When I woke up, I got up and rolled the trousers and the shirt into the sweater and put them back in a corner of the

7 Spearheads Of Air Might Hit Europe

Rails, Airfields Installations, Oil Refineries, Fields Left in Flames

London, June 28 (AP).—In one of the most impressive demonstrations of air power to date the Allies flung seven major heavy spearheads into four European countries today, hammering important enemy installations all the way from France to Roumania.

From England, fleets of American and British bombers roared over simultaneously in daylight for the first time, hitting an array of targets from French airfields to railroads within the Reich itself.

The Mediterranean air force—with a force of some 500 heavy bombers plus fighter escorts—smashed two oil refineries at Bucharest, rail yards at Chitila, Romania, on the route to Bucharest from the Ploesti oil fields, and a German airdrome at Karlova, Bulgaria.

Split Into Three Forces

A Britain-based Liberator and Flying Fortress group split likewise into three task forces, one going to the railroad yards at Saarbrucken just across the German border, the second streaming over the Paris area, and the third rumbling on to Laon, 70 miles northeast of Paris, and hitting three air bases.

Simultaneously, RAF Halifaxes gave flying bomb installations in the Pas-de-Calais their fourth heavy drubbing in less than 24 hours.

Somewhat improved weather conditions enabled fighter-bombers to join the almost endless procession of daylight raiders. They raced along the battle lines in Normandy, hammering convoys, [illegible] concentrations and supply dumps.

Three-Way Shuttle Assault

Even this demonstration of Allied aerial might was heightened with the delayed announcemtnt that Britain-based American Flying Fortresses which dealt Berlin one of the heaviest blows of the war on June 21 and then flew on to bases in Russia, had thundered out from the Soviet Monday, hurled bombs into an oil refinery at Drohobycz, in old Poland, and flown on to Italy to complete the first three-way shuttle bombing attack of the war.

At sea, RAF Beaufighters pounced on seven E-boats off Holland and left two of them burning.

These operations followed an active night in which RAF Typhoon

Reds Smash Nazi Line, Peril Minsk

Three Fortified Cities, 1000 Other Places Captured On 250-Mile Front

London, June 28 (AP).—Smashing westward toward the big White Russia capital of Minsk, four powerful Red armies virtually completed destruction of the German Fatherland Line today by capturing the fortified cities of Mogilev, Lepel and Osipovichi and completing the encirclement of Bobruisk, it was announced tonight by Moscow.

Altogether more than 1000 populated places within the flaming 250-mile zone of fighting were taken during the day.

Mogilev fell to Col. Gen. Matvei Zakharov's second White Russia Army after 24 hours of bitter street fighting.

Two Nazi Generals Taken

In the course of blasting the Nazis out of their last fortress on the Dnepr River, the Russian troops captured two German generals, Lieutenant General Bammler and Major General Ermannsdorf, and routed the Twelfth German Infantry Division, said the broadcast communique.

The capture of Lepel placed the advancing first Baltic Army of Gen. Ivan Bagramian about 20 miles from the old Polish border.

Field dispatches said the Russians, was opened their tremendous summer offensive last Friday, were within 50 miles of Minsk.

Osipovichi, 60 miles southeast of Minsk on the railway to Bobruisk, was taken in a "deep outflanking" maneuver by Gen. Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's First White Russia Army and completed the encirclement of Bobruisk, Premier Stalin announced.

Five Divisions Trapped

The Russians already had trapped five German infantry divisions in the area of Bobruisk, 70 miles southwest of Mogilev, and the latest fighting conquered a new and larger area of encirclement. Stariye Dorogi, 38 miles west of Bobruisk; Osipovichi, 26 miles northwest, Klichev 25 miles due north, were captured.

The Soviet generals were using tanks and aircraft in great waves to help the infantry blast holes through the German lines and the communique said that in Tuesday's fighting 109 Nazi tanks and 61 enemy planes were destroyed on all fronts.

In the north on the Finnish front, Moscow said the Russians also were

Big Italian Port

Night Attack Puts U. S. Army Within 30 Miles of Leghorn

Rome, June 28 (AP).—American troops pushed within some 30 miles of the big Italian west coast port of Livorno (Leghorn) today after a savage all-night battle in which they hurled the Germans out of the coastal town of San Vincenzo.

The ferocity of the Nazis' resistance to the Yank advance was duplicated clear across the peninsula. Fresh German infantry and guns continued to join the battle, and the fighting was the fiercest since the Gustav and Hitler lines were cracked at the outset of the Allied offensive.

For hours the fighting raged from house to house in San Vincenzo. Every street was protected by barricades and wire entanglements. It was regarded as a sample of what the Allies may expect in every Italian town now between them and the Germans' Pisa-Rimini defense line.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring, having halted the disorganized flight of his forces, now obviously was determined to forestall an Allied assault on the "Gothic" Line this summer. The rough country prevented swift thrusts by Allied armor.

Four miles inland from San Vincenzo, other American armored forces surrounded and captured the town of Sasseta after a stiff fight with units of an elite SS division. Also occupied was the village of Chiusdino, 17 miles southwest of the communications center of Sienna. French troops advanced to the vicinity of San Quirico D'Orcia, 22 miles southeast of Sienna.

Eighth Army forces registered limited gains both west and east of Lake Trasimeno, 80 miles north of Rome, where the Germans have offered bitter resistance. Gioiella, 5 miles above Chiusi on the west side of the lake, fell after a six-hour fight. On the east side the Eighth Army stormed two heights about 5 miles above Perugia.

It was announced that 38 Nazi fighters were destroyed by American heavy bombers and fighters over the Budapest area yesterday, bringing to more than 100 the number shot down by the Italy-based air fleet in two days. Six Allied planes were lost yesterday.

3082 Yanks Die in 2 Weeks In Normandy

Total U. S. Losses Placed at 24,162, Allies Lose 16,387

London, June 28 (AP).—The first two weeks of the Normandy battle cost the Allies 40,549 casualties, including 24,162 Americans killed wounded or missing, supreme headquarters announced today, compared with 70,000 German casualties in three weeks of battle.

The Allied casualty figures do not include last week's losses in the final assault on Cherbourg, nor in the launching of the new British offensive in the Caen sector.

The casualty total for the period from June 6 to June 20, inclusive, listed 3082 Americans killed, 12.7 per cent of all American losses. Many of these came in the first two bloody days of fighting on the beaches, when elements of the First and Twenty-ninth Divisions (the latter including men from the Washington area) ran headlong into a German division engaged in maneuvers.

The British lost 1842 dead, 13.5 per cent of their total losses, and the Canadians, 363, or 12.9 per cent of their casualties. The total dead for all forces was 5287, 13 per cent of the total casualties.

Total missing was 12,183, some of whom probably are dead. Wounded totaled 23,079.

The Americans lost 13,121 wounded and 7959 missing. Of the 13,572 British total, 8599 were wounded and 3131 missing; and of the Canadians, with a 2815 total, 1359 were wounded and 1092 missing.

Warships Shell Japs on Tinian And in Kuriles

Carrier Planes Hit Guam in Support of Advance on Saipan

Pearl Harbor, June 28 (AP).—United States warships shelled Japanese positions in the northern Kuriles and on Tinian in the Marianas, thousands of miles apart, while carrier planes again raked Guam and Rota to support a further American advance on invaded Saipan, key island in the stepping-stone chain to Japan.

These fast-breaking actions were announced today by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. He also reported futile attacks by Japanese torpedo planes on an American carrier force and transports off Saipan.

The advance on Saipan took Marines and Infantry 2 miles northward along the eastern coast of that island. At the western end of the sector assault forces had battered their way farther into Garapan. The Nipponese were making a desperate effort to hold that island capital city. No mention was made of the mountainous central sector, where last reports said heavy fighting was raging.

Kurabu Zaki, principal town at the southern tip of Paramushiro, in the Kuriles, was shelled Sunday night. There were no details of this third bombardment of that enemy naval base. In a prelude, Army and Navy planes hit Paramushiro and adjoining Shumushu Island before dawn Sunday. A follow-up attack was made again before dawn Monday.

In Monday's attack, 11 Japanese interceptors pounced on a single Navy Ventura. At least three of the attackers were damaged, while

Main Forces Of Enemy Driven Back Below Caen

Confused Fighting Rages Between Orne Canal and Road Going to Sea

Allied Supreme Headquarters, London, (Thursday), June 29 (U.P.), British tanks defeated the main German armored force in western France Wednesday in a crashing daylong battle below Caen and drove on 4 miles to open country beyond the Odon River after smashing nine triphammer counterattacks, front reports said today.

The Tommies clashed head-on with Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's panzers after bringing Caen under two-thirds encirclement with the help of other British forces who launched a coordinated attack north and northeast of the city. Confused battles were reported in progress in the latter sector last night between the Orne Canal and Caen's main road to the sea.

At headquarters the only word was that the main German tank force, the bulk of four panzer divisions, had been brought into action, but front dispatches said the British had won a decisive victory after throwing back the counter-blows with heavy losses.

Main Nazi Defenses Breached

Other front reports said the British tanks had breached the main German defenses facing the beachhead and a headquarters spokesmn said pointedly that the most important statement in the 11:30 p. m. communique was that "our advance continues toward high ground south of the Odon," which has been crossed on a 5-mile front.

Throughout the day, field reports said, British tanks poured across the river and fanned out behind the German line in full exploitation of the breakthrough. Advance elements reached Esquay, bypassing the stronghold of Evrecy 2 miles to the southwest and pushing within 1½ miles of the Orne River.

Indicating that the mop-up of German remnants on Cap de la Hague wast of Cherbourg has been completed, headquarters said that operations in that sector "continued until last night" (Wednesday.)

Nazis Use Tanks First Time

With Caen immediately threatened, the Germans for the first time since D?Day threw in tanks in great number and with reckless abandon in an attempt to save the city.

Throughout Wednesday, fierce armored slugging matches raged but late in the day, a front dispatch reported, the British emerged victorious from what was easily the biggest tank battle of the campaign.

Nelson's Illness Pronounced Mild

Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, who has been in Doctor's Hospital for several days, was reported to have had a mild case of pneumonia, but is a "great deal better," it was revealed last night by Bruce Catton, WPB director of information.

Nelson was admitted to the hospital for treatment of what was described as a cold. Following the development of the pneumonia, Catton said, Nelson's temperature dropped yesterday, and he slept easily.

Relations of U. S. With Finland Reported Near Breaking Point

Stockholm, June 28 (AP).—Finnish-American relations appeared ready to snap tonight as first-hand reports received here said the Germans swarmed through Helsinki like locusts after the swift coup d'etat which handed over Finland to the Reich.

All pretense that Finland battled only to settle her own score with Russia was at an end, after President Risto Ryti, Premier Edwin Linkomies and Finance Minister Vaino Tanner bowed to Nazi pressure.

Without risking submission of the decision to Parliament—an eyewitness said the decision would have met resounding defeat—the leaders came to terms with Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, Gen. Alfred Jodl and Col. Gen. Eduard Dietl, and called upon the populace for open military support of Germany.

The Germans already had turned Helsinki into a parade ground when the government announced officially that Von Ribbentrop had sent troops in response to a Finnish appeal and that "perfect understanding" had been reached.

The eyewitness, who left Helsinki last night, gave this account of the events leading to yesterday's coup:

"A week ago Monday there was a well organized move to force a change in the government to one which could ask Russia for peace. Through bungling and dilly-dallying, the opportunity was missed. A new cabinet list actually was ready, with Foreign Minister Sir Henrik Ramsay as premier; and with Labor Minister Kustaa Emil Hynninen as the new foreign minister.

"But Ryti held it up, fighting for time, because he still feels the Russians are nearing the exhaustion point and eventually the Germans will be able to force a compromise peace in the east.

"The result was that the Germans gained a whole week to prepare for any eventuality—a coup d'etat if necessary."

Chinese Reds Defy Chiang Fight Order

Shensi Faction Told to Strike Japs, Fails to Move

Chungking, June 28 (U.P.).—The Chinese communist army has ignored an order from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek to fight the Japanese, Minister of Information Liang Han-Chao disclosed today.

Friction has long existed between the Central Chinese government and the Communists, who control most of Shensi Province. The Communists charge they are persecuted by Chungking and in turn have been accused of autonomous conduct.

Liang said Communist troops were ordered to launch diversionary action against the invaders in Honan last month, but failed to fight or even reply.

"The government consistently has followed with all sincerity the resolution to reach a settlement (with the Communists) through political means," Liang asserted. "It has laid down some very definite proposals and is awaiting the response thereto from the Communists."

Hengyang Encircled

Chungking, June 28 (AP).—Hengyang, junction of the Canton-Hankow and Hunan and Kwangsi railways, has been encircled, the Chinese admitted tonight, and the way appeared open for Japanese drives either directly south to capture the rest of the Canton-Hankow Route, or southwest toward Kwangsi Province.

Loss of Hengyang would be the most grievous blow to the Chinese since 1938.

A successful southward drive would split China in two and give the enemy an unbroken supply line for 1000 miles from north to south.

American pilots fighting over Hunan and Yunnan provinces lost seven planes.

Liang Han-chao, minister of information, expressed hope the Allies could give China "more material help and spiritual encouragement."

Chinese Take Namti

Kandy, Ceylon, June 28 (AP).—Taking swift advantage of their capture of the Japanese north Burma supply base of Mogaung, Chinese troops have lunged 6 miles eastward toward Myitkyina, embattled bastion 30 miles away, and have captured Namti, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

Inside Myitkyina, already encircled by American and Chinese forces, the Chinese took another strong point in the southern sector.

Headquarters announced the Allies have lost 6000 men killed or missing and 12,000 wounded from January 1 to May 31 in the Burma-India campaign and that the Japanese in the same period lost 21,700 dead and a probable 20,000 wounded. These figures did not include the North Burma campaign.

War Sidelights

Pilots Take Kegs of Beer In Extra Tanks

With the Ninth Air Force in Normandy, June 28 (U.P.).—American fighter pilots based in France used the belly tanks on their planes—originally used for carrying extra gasoline—to bring many of their personal belongings including a few kegs of beer, from England last Monday.

For the short hop across the English Channel, the tanks, which are located under the wings of the planes, were packed with clothing, food, and numerous other items.

closet."

Fisher told the jury that the night before the slaying he had visited several "beer joints." He spent most of the night with a girl called Elaine.

Mentality of a Child

Earlier in the day, Dr. Astrea S. Campbell, psychologist at Howard University, told the jury that tests she had given to Fisher revealed that he had the mentality of a child of 11 years and 4 months. Under cross-examination she admitted however, that the tests were set-up so that the highest mental age attainable would be 16 years.

Fisher was declared by Dr. Ernest Y. Williams, professor of neurology and psychiatry at Howard University, who testified for the defense, to be predominantly an aggressive type with a purely impulsive nature.

Dr. Williams said he had examined the man at the District jail some time after his arrest. "I don't believe he had the ability to distinguish between right and wrong at the time of the crime. I don't believe he was capable of entertaining an intent to kill her. But he couldn't resist and impulse to kill because of an unsound mind," he told the jury.

Sanity Query Unanswered

Dr. Williams said that he could not answer categorically yes or no to the question of whether Fisher was sane or insane at the time of the crime. "All of the elements of an insane person were present, however," he added.

Another psychiatrist, Dr. Edgar D. Griffin, senior medical officer of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, called by the state offered contradictory testimony.

"I believe he was very mad, and that there was provocation," Dr. Griffin said, "but I think he was perfectly capable of understanding the nature and quality of his act and of knowing it was wrong."

Dr. Williams testified Fisher admitted he had been drinking heavily for the last two years.

The defense rested following the testimony of Dr. Griffin. Counsel for the Government and the defense will offer arguments today and the case is expected to go to the jury by afternoon.

Shklov, 20 miles north of Mogilev, and Bykhov, 23 miles south of the city, also fell to the crushing giant pincers.

Berlin acknowledged it could not check the sweep westward through White Russia along a 250-mile front less than an hour's plane flight from East Prussia. Moscow hailed the drive as an auspicious start on the march to Berlin, 580 miles west of Minsk. The Russians were astride the main route and traveling at one of the fastest paces of the war.

Foe Still Holds Minsk

The troops closest to Minsk, largest Russian city (239,000) still in German hands, were those of 36-year-old Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky. He was pressing for fresh kills at Borisov and along the Berezina banks after taking Orsha. His northern flank joined the troops under General Bagramian's first Baltic army now menacing Borisov with a wide encircling maneuver.

Berlin asserted that the Russians had started a new offensive between Ostrov and Pskov, gateways to the Baltic states, using four or five divisions. They reported the Russians storming Polotsk on the approaches to southern Latvia.

Annapolis, Md., June 28 (AP).—The State Tidewater Fisheries Commission today released a complete report on the results of its oyster program for 1944, announcing that 1,060,083 bushels of shells and 263,-218 bushels of seed had been planted on various bars in the Chesapeake Bay and tributary streams this spring.

The report was made public at a meeting of the three-man commission with State conservation advisory officials.

Reich Navy At the Bottom, German Says

Madrid, June 28 (AP).—Rear Admiral Richard Gadow, retired German naval officer, declares the German navy is finished and now is "in process of reorganization."

Gadow, considered the principal spokesman for the German navy, said the answer to the question "where are our U-boats and heavy warships" was that they were at the bottom of the sea.

The submarine arm, Gadow said, had great success until 1943 "when technical defense of the enemy put an end to these achievements." The German navy, he continued, could change from defense to offensive actions only if Allied coastal air bases are destroyed.

Manpower needs for the land and air forces, he said, prevented the German navy from completing many warships planned or on the ways.

Sherman, was, and is, one of the cultural centers of the State, and Frances and I will thank you not to get any erroneous ideas about the place. We'll be particularly pleased if you remember that the town was not named after the Yankee general who blazed his way across Georgia to the sea in the War Between the States.

Our Sherman was named after a full-fledged Texas hero whose name went down in history in the war for Texas independence.

Sherman was, and is, Southern in atmosphere, heritage and hospitality, as typically Southern in all those respects as any other up-and-coming city you'll find below the Mason-Dixon line. Frances' forebears, and mine, were Confederate soldiers and sons and daughters of the Confederacy, and in case anybody happens to ask you, mighty proud of the privilege, suh.

and seconded the nomination of Governor Dewey.

There were cries of "No, no," and one of those yelling loudest was 90-year-old "General" Jacob Coxey of Massilon, Ohio, who led a march on Washington back in the 80's.

The Governor persisted, and he was given a tremendous ovation.

Warren Walks Out

Bricker by this time had been assured of the vice presidential nomination, the Dewey people having turned to him after the stunning announcement by Gov. Earl Warren of California that he "could not accept."

Two other candidates for the number one prize quickly withdrew after Governor Bricker's gesture, Lieut. Comdr. (former Governor) Harold Stassen of Minnesota, and Representative Everett Dirksen of Illinois.

Once the balloting started for President, it was an uninterrupted Dewey parade until Wisconsin was reached. When the chairman of that delegation announced 23 votes for Dewey and 1 for MacArthur, a groan of disappointment came from the convention. It was akin to the sound that is heard when a baseball pitcher just misses a no-hitter.

Irked by Vandenberg

Grant A. Ritter, the 54-year-old Beloit dairy farmer who cast the MacArthur vote, explained that he did so because of the conduct of Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, who was on the platform. He said that Dr. John O. Koehler, another Wisconsin delegate, had gone to the platform with an 11-page nominating speech for MacArthur, but had been grabbed by the lapels by Vandenberg and held until it was too late.

Loafing Irks Judge

Boston (U.P.).—Arraigned on a non-support charge, Harry C. Ingram, 32, Roxbury father of six children, boasted that he hadn't done a lick of work in 10 years. "I hate to break your record," countered the judge, "but if you don't get a job within 48 hours I'll get you 10 to pick from."

duplicated the trip made by Franklin D. Roosevelt when the latter was Governor in 1932. Nominated for president by the Democrats, Mr. Roosevelt flew to Chicago to accept.

Dewey and his party set out for Chicago about an hour after the Governor was told on the telephone by Harrison Spangler, chairman of the Republican National Committee, that.

"I am happy to advise you of the nomination."

Willkie Congratulates Him

He started for the convention still an undeclared candidate for the nomination which he had sought futilely four years ago. Then, although a pre-convention favorite, he was beaten by Wendell Willkie.

Today, Willkie telegraphed Dewey congratulations, but the Western Union declined to transmit the message because of a wartime ban on such messages. Willkie had said, "You have one of the great opportunities of history." Dewey heard the text on the radio and released to the press "a thank you" reply to his erstwhile rival.

The governor, spic and span in a new gray summer suit and hat, remained upstairs in his executive mansion suite until after his talk with Spangler. Then he descended to the first floor, where he was greeted by newspapermen, photographers, aides and a few close friends.

Waves To Crowd Boarding Plane

The automobile trip to the airport began shortly afterward. Dewey, manifestly in a jovial mood, waved to the crowd as he boarded the plane.

At the mansion Dewey received a telegram from Joseph W. Martin, jr., permanent chairman of the convention, stating:

"May I, in behalf of this great Republican convention, advise you of your nomination for President. Heartiest congratulations. We know you will make a winning fight.'"

Mrs. Dewey arrived in Albany thsi morning from the Dewey farm near Pawling, where she left the two Dewey sons, Thomas, jr., 11, and John Martin, 8.

Yanks Storm Hill; 60 of 125 Return Safe

Hill Above Cherbourg, June 26 (Delayed) (AP).—Until Friday afternoon, 300 Germans behind 26 guns held this place frantically.

It is in American hands today and will be French tomorrow, due to the courage of Second Lieut. John C. Rebarchek, 24, Gracetown, Minn. The enemy's five 105-millimeter guns, five 88s and 16 other automatic weapons awed him not a whit.

Rebarchek led 125 Fourth Division men up the wooded slope, through fragrant meadow grass in storming this strongpoint against withering frontal and flanking fire. Three times he leaped on top of a tank rallying his men and keeping the assault moving forward. When victory came, only 60 of his command were still in combat; 25 were dead and 40 were wounded.

But 228 Germans came out waving white flags and behind them were 70 dead.

Rebarchek's colonel said he was recommending the lieutenant for a Congressional Medal of Honor, adding:

"I believe that in all 20 days of the invasion, there has been a no more heroic attack. The men were magnificent. As the wounded came back they wanted to know only one thing—how are we doing?"

Youth to Testify In Death of Father

James Miller, Negro, 17, of 2215 12th pl. nw., who is said to have struck his father, Lott Miller, in an argument, will testify at a coroner's inquest into the man's death tomorrow.

The elder Miller, 51, was treated for lacerations at Freedmen's Hospital and released on June 10. On the same night he was taken to Garfield Hospital and found to be suffering from meningitis. He died on June 27.

Confession Of Youth Frees Boy in Murder

Detroit, June 28 (AP).—The "complete confession" of a 20-year-old youth in the slaying of 14-year-old Joyce Raulston, whose stabbed and beaten body was found on a dump last March, was announced today, and another youth being tried for the murder was liberated.

Richard Vincent, who once confessed and then repudiated his statement saying it was made under duress, was turned loose. Robert Miller Turner, 20, a war plant employe is the youth now held.

Vincent was on the witness stand for cross-examination when the new development suddenly freed him. His mother said, "Thank God."

Turner was arrested after the Raulston girl's purse was found at his rooming house. He was quoted as saying his car broke down on the night of March 27, and he started to walk. He met Joyce on the road, he said, and walked a while with her. Then struck her on the head, ran her down and stabbed her with a knife.

His only motive was that he "had an urge to kill.'"

Home Raiders Kill 'Goebbels Of France'

London, June 28 (AP).—French underground executioners struck boldly in Paris early today, killing Philippe Henriot, Vichy Minister of Propaganda, and escaped.

Fifteen or 20 uniformed patriots invaded the ministry-home of the "Goebbels of France" and shot him, Axis radios reported.

Spanish border reports said Henroit was slain by his own bodyguard as the result of a quarrel with other Vichy propagandists over policies.

An editorial Henriot wrote in Monday's Echo de Nancy intimated he believed the German cause was lost, saying, "Now France is a battlefield, and it is too late to weep."

The dramatic blow silenced one of the most hated voices in France. Since last January, the 55-year-old former school teacher has broadcast twice daily, exhorting Frenchmen to aid the Nazis for the sake of the future of France.

Before the war, Henriot was a Rightest deputy. He joined the Germans soon after France fell.

The German DNB news agency said several carloads of men drove up to the gate before Henriot's residence just before 6 a. m., today and held up two guards with tommyguns. Three men, "evidently acquainted with the plan of the house," then entered and shot down Henriot in his pajamas, the agency reported.

An effort was made to kill Henriot at Tarbes in May, 1943, when three bombs exploded in a hall where he was speaking. Several persons were killed but Henriot escaped injury.

It was reported today from Port Bou, Spain, that French guerillas striking in the Tarbes region of the Pyrenees had blown up stretches of the railroad between Auch and Tarbes.

the Ventura was damaged superficially.

Two attacks were made by Ninponese torpedo bombers on the fleet off Saipan. The first was directed at the carrier force. The second, on Monday night, was against transports. Not a single American ship was hit in either attack. One enemy plane was shot down and probably a second.

On Saipan, a desperate enemy force surrounded for several days on Nafutan point, in the southeast sector, broke through containing Yank lines Monday night in a futile effort to fight northward.

Two hundred Japanese were killed.

In the carrier plane strikes on Guam and Rota, the Japanese offered no air opposition at Guam or Rota.

fighter-bombers and rocket shooters staged a precision attack on a German army corps headquarters—a single house in the little town of St. Sauveur-Lendelin, just below the Normandy front about 15 miles southwest of Carentan.

As the building crumbled into smoking ruins—without damage to a church 500 yards away—the 1000 RAF heavy night bombers attacked the Pas-DeCalais area and two big interior rail yards. Battlefront support was carried out also during the night by RAF Mosquitos which hit German transport lines.

Fires Called For

Coeur, D'Alene, Idaho (U.P.).—The Coeur D'Alene fire department appears to be working on a call and deliver basis. When they found a smoldering mattress in a three-story building they simply wrapped it up and took it back to the station, where they extinguished the blaze in the back yard.

Baker's Woes

On Right Road To End Robots, Commons Told

London, June 28 (U.P.).—British officials announced progress today against German robot bombs and their bases and, as the intermittent bombardment continued, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden rejected a proposal that Britain seek Papal condemnation of the new German weapon.

Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair told Commons a "considerable number" of robot launching sites had been destroyed.

Gen. Sir Frederick Pile, anti-aircraft commander, said "we are on the right road" toward a 90 per cent destruction held necessary to break the onslaught.

RAF night fighters shot down many of the bombs over the Channel yesterday, a single fighter shooting down three in succession. Several robots got through, however, and caused casualties.

The Germans also bombarded the Channel coast for nearly 45 minutes. About 50 shells landed in the Dover area.

A German communique also said bombers attacked targets in southern England last night with bombs and machine guns.

Farley-Garner 'Plot' Expose Is Predicted

Richmond, Va., June 28 (AP).—Rixey Smith, secretary to Senator Carter Glass, stirred the curiosity of his hearers last night when he predicted a full "expose" soon of what he termed a "plot" by James A. Farley, former national committee chairman, and John Nance Garner, former Vice President, as well as "others," to effect a Southern "revolt" against the Roosevelt political interests.

Smith addressed more than 100 persons gathered at the Hotel John Marshall to form a Richmond Committee of 100 for the reelection of President Roosevelt.

He declared that "Renegade Democrats with a satchel full of carpetbag money hatched up the plot and stole the Texas convention."

"Whatever it is," Smith continued, "it is the most diabolical attempt ever made to destroy the democracy our boys are fighting for on the beachheads of Europe. The whole unholy plot will be exposed, and God help them who bought tickets to Bryan, Tex."

Smith blamed the Texas situation on Messrs. Farley, Garner and their friends. He said Roosevelt friends have the South Carolina situation "well in hand." He added that the Mississippi action was only a "bluff." He referred to the action of the Mississippi Democrats in convention in voting a resolution removing the compulsion of voting for the party nominee should the planks in the nominee's platform be held unsuitable to them.

The speaker was one of the organizers of the Committees for 100 for the reelection of President Roosevelt.

Coal Shortage Is Pictured As Serious

Frederick, Md., June 28 (AP).—A War Production Board official estimated today that U. S. coal output during the production year which began last April 1 would fall 38,000,000 tons short of requirements, and declared that "conservation is the only answer."

Davis M. De Bard, deputy director of WPB's conservation division, told a conference of Third Service Command Army officers that there was no adequate surplus to take up the slack between production and consumption because inventories were largely used last year.

In his address to the conference, called to discuss methods of increasing Army salvage in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia, De Bard said coal output last year that the lack was made up out of stocks. On January 1, the stocks were at a bare minimum, he said, and "they increased very little by June 1."

Three Workmen Are Electrocuted

Big Flattop Christened by Mrs. Gillette

Newport News, Va., June 28 (AP). Another mighty aircraft carrier of the Essex class, the Randolph, was towed into the James River from her graving dock at the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. plant today.

Attending Mrs. Gillette as matrons of honor were Mrs. E. A. Merritt of Chevy Chase, Md., and Mrs. Joseph A. Green of Richmond, Va., wife of Maj. Gen. Green, commanding general of the Antiaircraft Command. Mrs. Gillette was accompanied by her husband and 15-year-old son, Mark.

State Committee to Direct Maryland Milkweed Drive

Milkweed fiber has been found to be the best substitute available for kapok, cut off by the war, in the manufacture of life jackets.

Long considered a pest by farmers and stockmen because it infests their fields, the silky fibers have been found to be highly waterproof and buoyant, and the Government appeals to farmers not to mow their fields before the floss can be gathered, and to boys and girls to note the stands now for thorough harvesting in September.

Collection campaign for milkweed in Maryland will be under direction of a State committee headed by Edward M. Davis of the Soil Conservation Service; Mylo S. Downey, State 4-H Boys Club agent, vice chairman, and Miss Dorothy Emerson, Girls 4-H Club agent, secretary. They will enlist the help of Future Farmers of America, 4-H Clubs, Boy Scouts and other organizations to render assistance, committees being formed in each county of representatives of these groups.

Bags will be supplied to gatherers, who will be paid 20 cents for a one-bushel bag. Two bushels are required for one life jacket.

This campaign is sponsored by the War Food Administration, which will provide a man to assume charge.

Va. Chamber Maps Study Of Tax System

Richmond, Va., June 28 (AP).—A working outline for a study of the State's tax structure, was unanimously adopted today by the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce committee on taxation and government.

Members of the committee, headed by Dr. Robert H. Tucker, voted to confine the study "to a consideration of the revenue sources needed to finance such government expenditures as public policy may require." They also voted to place primary emphasis upon taxes levied and administered by the State's government.

It was agreed it will be necessary to consider the position of Virginia's tax system in the over all tax structure due to close relationships between local and State taxation in the State and the many interrelationships between Federal Governments and the State.

The outlet calls for studies of the changes in the State's economy, major tax legislation up to the present time, tendencies in State and local revenues in Virginia from 1903-44, and the committee also will attempt to evaluate the State's tax system as a whole, applying the criteria of a sound tax system to the Virginia system, such as its performance during the depression and during the war in comparison with other States.

Barley averages 37 bushels to the acre, also above last year's average yield, according to the county agent. Schoolboys between the ages of 13 and 16, and men from the Civilian Public Service Camp at Grottoes, and neighborhood pools of workers are being utilized to harvest this year's crops.

After Quite a 'Scrap'

Winchester, Va., June 28.—A "scrap flag," made by students in a sewing class at Handley High School, and contested in a monthly competition among city schools for the collection of material vital to the war effort, was awarded permanently recently to the John Kerr School.

Students in the school averaged 114.02 pounds each during the contest to gain permanent possession of the flag. A certificate of merit was awarded the Virginia Avenue School, where students averaged 113.08 pounds each. In all, the collections resulted in more than 77 tons of salvage being turned in.

Awarding the flag and making an address at the special program for the occasion was C. H. Luebbert, Richmond, executive secretary for the Virginia Salvage Committee.

Young Brothers Perish in Fire at Mountain Home

Front Royal, Va., June 28 (AP).—Glenn Fliggin, 6, and his brother, Charles, 10, sons of Mr. and Mrs. John Fliggin, were burned to death Sunday when fire destroyed the Fliggin home in a remote section of the Blue Ridge Mountains about 5 miles east of Linden. Neither parent was at home at the time of the fire.

The only other occupant of the house, George Harrington, jumped from a second-story window and suffered an injured hip and arm. Unable to rise from the ground, he was rescued by a passing motorist. He is in a local hospital.

Harrington said the fire originated in the kitchen, but could not explain how it started because there had been no fire in that room since the previous evening.

Capt. Andrews Visits Post, His Old Haunt

Marshall Andrews, veteran Washington Post rewrite man and military correspondent, tried out his old desk for size at The Post yesterday for the first time in nearly 18 months. A captain in the Infantry, Andrews was home on leave.

ANDREWS

Appointed a first lieutenant in 1943, Andrews was assigned to the famous 42d (Rainbow) Infantry Division at Camp Gruber, Okla., and planned and conducted its activation ceremonies July 14, 1943, for which he received a commendation from Maj. Gen. Harry J. Collins, Division commander. At present, Andrews is S-2 of the 232d Infantry Regiment, in charge of Military Intelligence on the Staff of Col. W. H. Vinson, a brother of Representative Carl Vinson of Georgia.

Andrews covered military matters for the Post in 1941, 1942 and early 1943. He spent much of his time with the Army in the field, in 1942 making a circuit of Army installations in the United States and wrote a Post series, "Our New Army," which later was published in book form by Little Brown and Company. In 1942 he flew to the British Isles and back to write another series, "Yanks in Ireland."

Garrett County Tornado Timber Damage Heavy

Cumberland, Md., June 28 (AP).—Approximately 4000 acres of timberland in Garrett County was destroyed in the recent tornado, William H. Johnson, district forester, estimated.

In Swallow Falls State Forest alone, nearly 600 acres of timberland was affected, Johnson said, with only about 1,000,000 feet of wood salvageable. He estimated that 3,000,000 feet would not be salvageable for mine posts and other uses because the trees were twisted to pieces.

Damage was estimated at approximately $21,000.

'Pivot' Stocks Lose in Day of Heavy Buying

New York, June 28 (AP).—Most standard leaders lost ground in today's stock market but heavy buying converged on low priced motors and specialties and gains in these ranged from fractions to around two points.

The pivotals, at new seven-year highs Tuesday on the fall of Cherbourg, were down from the start. Their extreme losses of fractions to around two points were reduced a bit in the late dealings but profit selling dominated throughout. The Associated Press 60-stock composite declined .2 of a point to 55.4.

A wave of buying in Willys-Overland touched off the boomlet in the low quoted automobile and accessory shares. Buying here was accompanied by Wall Street rumors of postwar consolidations and talk of planning for aggressive competitive moves when the automobile market comes back. This section of the list accounted for a sharp rise in activity in the final hour which left the day's volume at 1,745,810 shares against 2,179,135 yesterday.

Nomination of Governor Dewey on the first ballot at the Republican convention had little effect on the price swings, having merely fulfilled earlier forecasts.

New Patrick Murphy Annoys Mr. Sol Levy; Amusement Gossip

WITHOUT DIMINUTION of its power as a dynamo of comedy during the latter half of the play, the role of Patrick Murphy in Anne Nichols' "Abie's Irish Rose," currently enjoying a resounding renaissance at the National Theater, now is being played by Arthur Jarrett, vice Donald Brian.

ARTHUR JARRETT

In this disclosure, of course, there is the possible source of a considerable confusion in the minds of those whose memories can be stretched farther back than yesterday morning.

It is not the Art Jarrett of "Street Singer" fame on stage, screen and radio who has taken over the part of the irascible Celtic father in the indestructible, bi-racial comedy. The Arthur Jarrett whose duty it now becomes to keep Solomon Levy's blood pressure practically at the bursting point is Art Jarrett's father.

There is nothing in the record to indicate that Arthur Jarrett, pere, ever had them swooning as Prince Danilo in "The Merry Widow," but there is a good deal of evidence that he is a splendid selection for his present assignment.

Last fall, for instance, when Mr. Brian was down with the flu in Cincinnati, it was Jarrett who leaped into his place on what passes for a moment's notice and played the part until Mr. Brian was able to rejoin the company in his home town of Boston, along about Christmas time.

So successful was the Jarrett pinch-hitting that he has been playing the elder Murphy ever since in the West Coast Company, having jumped all the way from Oakland, Calif., to Washington to resume his chore in the East.

Having been the most popular and highest-paid stock leading man of his day, Mr. Jarrett more recently has devoted his talents to direction, with quite a batch of successful productions to his credit.

With the War Bond Premiere of "Follow the Boys" successfully placed in the past tense at RKO-Keith's last night, there remains for midcity Washington only the similar celebration of the presentation in the Capital of Bette Davis in "Mr. Skeffington," at the Earle Theater on Thursday night, July 13. Beginning today, "Mr. Skeffington" begins its sixth consecutive week of overflow business at the Warner Brothers' Hollywood Theater, in New York. That ought to mean something. Claude Rains plays opposite the star in the film version of the famous novel by "Elizabeth," with such notables in support as Marjorie Riordan, Walter Abel, George Coulouris, Robert Shayne and Richard Waring—the original Morgan Evans with Ethel Barrymore in "The Corn Is Green"—making his screen debut. The bond premiere is completely sold out, but the ensuing regular run of "Mr. Skeffington," naturally, is not.

When "Between Two Worlds" opens on the screen at the Metropolitan tomorrow, theatergoers will be meeting an eminently worthy old friend under a new name. The piece, in its original stage version, revivals and previous filmings, heretofore has been known as "Outward Bound," one of the most engrossing plays of this generation. It seems to have been exceedingly well cast for the present outing.

The Record Mounts

According to a recent bulletin, a total of 1200 stars of stage, screen and radio have gone overseas to provide an entertainment antidote for operational fatigue of battle-weary fighting forces.

In the continental, home-front area, USO-Camp Shows have given 40,000 performances before audiences estimated at 30 million. In the domestic area at present, USO-Camp Shows, Inc., has 367 entertainers touring the Victory Circuit; 300 on the Blue Circuit and 38 entertainers in four units on the new Purple Heart Circuit.

The Victory Circuit provides full-scale musicals, dramas and concerts at 640 Army posts and Naval stations in the United States, having theaters large enough to accommodate them. On the Blue Circuit, smaller companies are offered at 1164 Army and Navy installations with limited theater facilities or none at all. In the latter cases, performances are given from trucks or improvised stages. The Purple Heart Circuit provides special entertainment in wards and auditoriums of all general and convalescent hospitals.

Washington's Community War Fund is one of the supporting agencies of USO-Camp Shows, if you have been curious as to where some of your money goes.

Frank Boucher, the Beau Brummelian general manager of the Kogod and Burka Theaters in Washington these past several years, has resigned that post, effective July 15, to assume the same duties with the Meiselman Theaters in the Carolinas. Prior to joining K-B, Mr. Boucher was New York zone manager for the Schine Circuit. Mr. Meiselman, it seems, is planning an expansion of his theater chain. Mr. Boucher is an expansive fellow. His local successor has not as yet been named.

With the Fifth War Loan drive a shade over the half-way mark, Prince Georges County theaters, over in Maryland, report 68 per cent of their quota already accounted for. The Hyattsville Theater, the Maryboro Theater, and the Cameo, in Mount Rainier, are 'way over their original goals and now busy working on "doubles." Nice going.

Va. Naval Officer Cited for Part In Rabaul Attack

Comdr. Paul R. Anderson, U. S. Navy, of 2110 No. Columbus st., Arlington, has been commended by Admiral W. F. Halsey, jr., Third Fleet commander, "for skillful and effective performance of duty as commanding officer of a destroyer during the attack by carrier aircraft on the strongly held enemy harbor at Rabaul, New Britain, on November 11, 1943.

"When the task force of which his ship was a unit was attacked by approximately 150 enemy planes, so skillfully did Commander Anderson fight his ship that severe losses were inflicted upon the enemy without damage to his vessel. His courageous and intelligent leadership, which materially contributed to the defense of the entire task group, was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service," the Navy said.

Commander Anderson was born May 1, 1907, at Statesville, N. C. His wife, Mrs. Harriet Mitchell Anderson, resides at the Virginia address.

Finds 'Flying Boat'

Baltimore, June 28 (AP).—When Elizabeth U. Hooper of Baltimore saw a sizeable object dropping from the sky, she related today, several ideas flashed through her mind—but none was right.

When she examined the object, it was a collapsible rubber boat, of the type carried in airplanes.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, June 28.—A revolt is brewing at the Writers War Board as a result of Rex Stout's statement on What To Do With Germany. Dorothy Thompson, William Shirer, Lewis Gannett and Henry S. Canby have registered dissents, and eight resignations may follow . . . For the first time since he became of age, Nelson Rockefeller will not contribute to the Republican campaign . . . Senator Maloney's Committee on Fuel will issue a report, announcing that a coal shortage this winter is inevitable. It will recommend that house-owners who converted from oil to coal, to conserve oil, now should reconvert, because oil is more plentiful.

ETHEL BARRYMORE

Ex-Senator George Norris, who organized the Norris-LaGuardia Committee in '40 has had to decline the invitation to campaign again. The venerable Norris can't travel and, because he's just had his teeth removed, can't make speeches . . . There'll be a 5-inning softball game played at Madison Square Garden between the Leading Men and the Comedians of the Broadway shows. The chorus-lines will entertain between innings, and Ethel Barrymore will umpire one inning. The game will be sponsored by the Theatre Wing and the Police Athletic League . . . The Canadian-American Defense Commission will meet in N. Y. this week.

All details of the N. Y. C. Fashion Center project will be announced on Thursday. The center, which will be located on the East Side, from 23d to 32d st., already has leased space to a remarkable array of tenants. General Hines, boss of the retaining and rehabilitation program under the Baruch plan, has hired Robert Burns of the War Labor Board to be his research man . . . While the Army has evacuated the Breakers Hotel in Palm Beach, it will retain possession until September. In the meantime, the Army has reserved a camp nearby, at Daytona Beach, for the wounded who once were sent to the Breakers.

Irene Rich, the screen actress, expects to make a tour of the war fronts for the American Red Cross. . . . Maury Maverick, head of the Smaller War Plants Corp., has been voted a $2000 salary increase to $10,000 a year. Two of his aides, directly responsible to him, have been receiving $9000 a year, which is more than their boss got . . . The naval medicine paintings made by combat artists were exhibited at the AMA convention in Chicago. From these paintings the convening doctors learned of the new methods being employed by physicians at the front. The paintings, paid for by Abbott Laboratories, were presented to the Navy.

Josephine Baker is entertaining the troops in Corsica. . . . Lieut. Eddy Duchin, who has been in the Navy for almost two years, played the piano only once during this period. "When the war is over and I reorganize my orchestra," said Duchin, "I think that before I could get back into my old form it would take me at least two hours." . . . Paramount soon may announce a new executive producer, succeeding Buddy de Sylva. The latter, eminently successful at his job, now wants from Paramount the same semi-independent production deal which the studio made with Hal Wallis, and De Sylva is expected to get it. . . . Arthur Bunker's appointment as deputy executive to Charles E. Wilson at the War Production Board will be announced this week.

Tom Wallace, veteran of the Eagle Squadron and husband of Carole Landis, has been promoted to major . . . The military experts state that Lieut. Col. Miller will be restored to his rank of major general within one year—that the record in this case will not support the drastic penalty . . . Because Jerry Wald produced the movie, "Destination Tokyo," and now is producing "Objective, Burma," the studio no longer refers to them as Wald productions but as Jerry Wald campaigns . . . The political feud between rival Hollywood organizations is vanishing. The rightists, the Motion Picture Alliance, haven't had a meeting in two months.

Bert Wheeler, the Copacabana star, has had three wives, each of whom received generous financial settlements. Last week Wheeler showed a photo of his new girl to Dinty Moore, the restaurateur. Moore studied the picture appraisingly, then returned it to Wheeler with a one-word warning: "$20,000" . . . Marlene Dietrich reports that Jean Gabin, now in the French Navy, not only has seen much action but also has had to swim for it . . . Phillip Brownell, the new assistant general counsel of the War Labor Board, is the brother of Herb Brownell, one of Dewey's intimates and now campaigning for the Governor in Chicago.

A few years ago, in Normandy, rose-expert Eugene S. Boerner, the chief hybridizer for the old nursery firm of Jackson & Perkins, escaped ahead of the advancing Nazis, from France with 10,000 budding rose plants. These were the last of such plants to be gotten out of Europe . . . For the past few years Boerner has been working on these plants, in the up-State town of Newark, N. Y. These roses from Normandy are in bloom now. They began to bloom on the day Newark opened its annual rose festival. The day was June 6, D-Day.

Sugar Charge Dropped

Hagerstown, Md., June 28 (AP).—A charge of illegal purchase of sugar against Frank Kefauver, Washington County farmer, was dismissed today by U. S. Commissioner C. Welles Little.

Kefauver was one of seven persons arraigned after an investigation by Federal authorities into circulation of counterfeit sugar ration coupons.

Amazing results in building STURDY BODIES!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

YOUNG people, especially those of grammar and high school age, are prone to be deficient in stomach digestive juices and red-blood.

A growing person who is operating on a 65 to 70% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 50 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.

In such cases Nature needs extra help. Organic troubles or focal infection, if they exist, must be corrected. Tissue foods must be digested and rich, red-blood must be present to build sturdy bodies.

SSS Tonic is especially designed (1) to promote the flow of VITAL DIGESTIVE JUICES in the stomach which digest the food so the body can make proper use of it in tissue building and repair and (2) to build-up BLOOD STRENGTH when deficient.

These two important results enable the body to make use of the food as Nature intended. Thus you may gain a keen appetite . . . firm flesh . . . body energy . . . mental alertness!

Texas Election

In an adjoining column Secretary Jones denies all participation in the trick device adopted by the Texas Democratic convention to leave its electors uninstructed. The denial is an answer to a Post editorial of June 22 in which we suggested that the two public men commonly mentioned in connection with the plot to disfranchise Roosevelt voters in Texas should free themselves from the stigma of identification. Mr. Jones was one. Mr. William L. Clayton was the other. We are glad to have Mr. Jones' disavowal, even though it doesn't contain, as we hoped it would, a denunciation of a plot which, as Mr. Lippmann said in his June 24 column, would present Mr. Roosevelt with the issue of popular government itself.

With respect to Mr. Clayton, we have it on reliable authority that the scheme owes nothing to any activity of his. Our apologies are due to Mr. Clayton if we seemed to give credence to the report, and we offer them unreservedly. It is established that he has not been active in organization politics in Texas. He is no longer even connected with the important cotton firm in Texas which used to be his career. After he decided to devote himself to public service, he liquidated his interests, and he did so completely. For this act of dissociation Mr. Clayton deserves and has got the esteem of his fellow administrators in Washington. Our own high opinion of Mr. Clayton's services to the Nation is already a matter of record. When he was appointed to his present post as Surplus War Property Administrator we noted "the respect he enjoys as to his personal character." We would go further: We believe the Government of this country would be infinitely better off if it had in its service more men of the ability and the integrity of Mr. Clayton.

This will emphasize the fact that The Post does not indulge in personalities. What it does is to hew to the policy that no public man carries an immunity where the public interest is concerned. In this respect a newspaper has an obligation as clear cut as that of the men engaged in public administration. The affair in Texas contained such vast implications for the security of this Republic that we deemed it part of our duty to invite the public officials who were reputed to be party to that affair publicly to deny any such association. We felt at the time we were not dealing in gossip. The report warranted comment in the public press because it had been taken seriously in responsible quarters, as both Mr. Jones and Mr. Clayton know.

FHA

The Federal Housing Administration, celebrating its tenth anniversary this week, looks back with pardonable pride on the record of its first decade of existence. During that period nearly six million families have been provided with better housing through loans of more than 7.5 billion dollars insured by the FHA. Since the outbreak of the war the FHA has been assisting private builders to provide housing for essential warworkers. But these wartime operations are of an ephemeral, emergency type, whereas the FHA was conceived as a peacetime agency and is looking forward to the time when its services will be needed to aid the financing of postwar demands for housing. Commissioner Ferguson says the agency will exert every effort to prevent inflationary prices for postwar homes and that it will continue to insure loans for building and buying homes that meet FHA standards.

The distinctive feature of the FHA's peacetime accomplishments is that it has not usurped the place of private lending institutions. Instead it has assisted them to do the financing job they wanted to do but were unable to undertake after financial collapse had resulted in a paralysis of mortgage lending and brought residential construction to a virtual standstill. By insuring mortgage holders against loss the FHA has benefited private banks, the private building industry and numerous homeowners, without cost so far to the taxpayers of the country. In fact, the agency has built up a reserve of 81 million dollars after paying all its operating expenses out of earnings during the past four years. These earnings are obtained from premiums on insurance of mortgages and loans, appraisal fees and interest on investments. Moreover, through regular repayments of principal as well as prepayments, the outstanding amount of insured loans has been reduced by more than a third.

Here is evidence that there is no necessary antagonism between Government and private enterprise, as so many people assume. From present indications insured loans of the FHA type are likely to find more widespread acceptance after the war than ever before, because considerable risk will attach to the financing of various postwar projects. In many cases, the choice will not lie between Government intervention and a hands-off policy. We may be forced to choose between limited Government intervention of the FHA type and direct Government financing. Unquestionably Government insurance against risks of loss that are an inevitable accompaniment of private business activity would undermine the foundations of free enterprise if carried too far. But selective insurance of the FHA kind based on sound business principles is an aid rather than a hindrance to private initiative.

Dewey: Candidate

The striking thing about the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey as Republican standard-bearer is the unanimity of it. On the first ballot the New Yorker collected all the votes save one, a Wisconsin delegate who was either an eccentric or a MacArthur idolator. Thus the party will go to the polls with a front that hasn't been shaken by the stress and strain of open competition. To be sure, there were those in the convention who would have chosen somebody other than Dewey. But the delegates seem to have decided at the outset that if the party were to carry the Presidency, personal preferences must give way to party solidarity. The 1056-to-1 selection will give a mighty fillip to the Republican rank and file throughout the country who have been hoping and who will now work with renewed zest to retrieve their party from 11 years in the political wilderness. They have reason to be grateful to their leaders at Chicago for an example of unanimity.

Governor Dewey has several obvious advantages which will weigh heavily with the great mass of indeterminate voters. At 42, he is young, younger indeed than any other candidate in the history of the Republican Party. The appeal of youth will be pressed with all the vigor of Republican resources. If the case is presented with the skill of Mr. Hoover on prenomination night, it will be persuasive. In almost valedictory vein the former President declared that the right to build its own world belongs to each generation. Doubtless Mr. Dewey in the course of his campaign will give evidence that out of his own generation will come his choices for new officeholders in our Federal Government. Such an appeal will be strengthened by contrast with the aged Roosevelt Administration, which, as we have hitherto shown, has been allowed to degenerate into a gerontocracy.

In the case of Mr. Dewey youth is backed by a rich administrative experience and a solid basis of achievement. He is Governor of the Empire State. Though only halfway through his first term, he is already rated a first-class administrator. Administrative ability, like youth, will court votes next November. For the lack of it happens to be the Achilles heel of the present incumbent of the White House. It was always true that administration is the keystone of all civilized government. As a nineteenth century political philosopher put it, "The execution of political measures is in reality the essence of them." If that were true in the days of simple government, how much truer is it in these days of complicated government!

Still Governor Dewey, as we have already said, must have much more than youth and experience and administrative ability with which to win. He must have a policy. The platform on which he will stand leaves many holes that he must plug, many loose statements that he must amplify or clarify. Particularly is this necessary on the part of Governor Dewey. His record in 1940 may not have been in correspondence with the position of former isolationists. But, with all its shadings and lacunae, it was in the isolationist vicinity. Since 1940, to be sure, he has broadened his outlook. In fact, he has changed it, and, when he was once queried about his changes, he retorted, "who hasn't?" But in his present role he must cleanse both his own thinking and purify his own following of any residual isolationism in order to sustain the faith of all forward-looking Republicans.

Willkie-ites, and even Republican Wilsonians who are preparing to go back to their Republican allegiance, are gentlemen from Missouri in respect of the Republican standard-bearer. Governor Dewey is thus put on his own mettle. In this respect he has one great advantage. In great measure the nomination has come to him, and he is not as beholden as many of his predecessors were to group interests, gratitude to whom demands from a candidate a good deal of straddling. From now on the measure of Dewey's stature as a statesman will be on public display to the American electorate.

Banking Condition

War financing is yielding very substantial profits to commercial banks, setting at rest fears that declines in the volume of loans, coupled with increased expenses of operation, would mean further decreases in already shrunken bank earnings. Instead, the tremendous expansion in the volume of bank-owned Government securities resulting from wartime deficit financing raised the 1943 current net earnings of member banks of the Federal Reserve System to the highest level reached since 1931. Net profits, which include recoveries on loans and securities and profits on sales of securities, reached a record level slightly above that of the previous peak attained in 1929. The Federal Reserve Bulletin points out that for the first time member bank earnings on securities exceeded interest and discount on loans, despite the fact that the rate of return on securities averaged only 1.4 per cent last year compared with an average of 3.4 per cent interest on loans.

While the banks taken as a whole have been relieved of immediate anxiety concerning their earning prospects, the war has brought about significant changes in the character of their assets. For, owing to the Government's failure to finance deficits entirely by noninflationary forms of borrowing, the commercial banks have been called upon to take over a large percentage of the war debt. The extent of the commercial banks' contribution is reflected in the extraordinarily rapid rise in the holdings of Government securities since the end of 1941. At that date insured commercial banks held 21 billion dollars of Government securities, while their total loans and investments amounted to 49.3 billion dollars. At the end of last year Government security holdings of insured commercial banks amounted to 58.7 billion dollars out of total loans and investments of 83.5 billion dollars. During that period the volume of commercial bank loans, by contrast, declined from 21.3 billion dollars to less than 19 billion dollars. As is evident from these figures, the commercial banks are now holding a large proportion of the outstanding public debt and a preponderant proportion of their assets consist of Government securities.

Occupied Finland

However much the Finnish leaders and the Germans may seek to disguise what has happened, the fact is that Finland has now gone the way of Hungary and Romania. Like those Balkan satellites of the Third Reich, Finland is today a Nazi-occupied country with no freedom or independence. Indeed, such a development became inevitable when the Finnish government rejected the successive peace offers made by Russia, and thus missed the opportunity to get Finland out of the war. It was an act of shortsightedness on their part for which their country is certain to pay dearly. For now that the Germans are in control at Helsinki, it will be possible to dislodge them only by force and that will mean more grief and more destruction for the Finns.

Even at the last the Finnish leaders were still deluding themselves with the belief that though they had allowed time and opportunity to slip through their hands, they were still free agents. According to Stockholm reports, Marshal Mannerheim and other Finnish leaders were asked to go to Germany, but refused. Whereupon Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop took it upon himself to visit Helsinki and lay down the law to the Finns. And close on his heels came German troops sent there, the Germans say, in answer to a cry for help on the part of the Helsinki government. Whether such demand for German aid was actually made is not clear.

Certainly Premier Linkomies and some of his colleagues are stupid enough to have made such a request of Berlin. But actually it makes no difference. The Nazis have never been particularly solicitous of the wishes or the feelings of their allies. They were willing to have Finland fight a separate war as long as it suited Hitler's interest that she do so. They are taking over the country for the same reason. In any event the Finns are now about to learn what so many other European peoples have learned, what it is to be occupied by the Nazis. It is likely to prove a sobering and anything but pleasant experience, particularly since it makes it all the more certain that Finland will become even more of a battlefield than it already is.

Allied Casualties

Nazi propagandists repeatedly seek to create the impression in their broadcasts that the country to which the broadcasts are beamed is bearing the full burden of the war. Thus, in the first year of the conflict, the French were told that "Great Britain plans to fight to the last Frenchman." At the same time the British were told that the French were planning to fight to the last Englishman. Similar attempts to sow dissension between Great Britain and the United States are still being made by Dr. Goebbels and his henchmen. The propaganda is not without success, though on a diminishing scale. A contributing factor is the tendency by the press of each country to play up the exploits of its own soldiers, though this in part is the fault of the military authorities, which don't afford adequate facilities for other than their own newspapermen.

Fortunately the general facts regarding the fighting in Africa, Sicily, Italy and Normandy are too well known to permit Nazi distortions to remain in currency very long. Americans have reason to be extremely proud of American arms in the Mediterranean and European theaters. But the victories have not been won by Americans alone. For example, Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons yesterday that in the first 10 months of the fighting in Italy, British casualties totaled 73,122, of which 14,331 were killed, 47,966 wounded with 10,825 listed as missing. This does not include losses suffered in the Italian campaign by the Royal Air Force or the British fleet. American Army casualties in the Italian campaign totaled 64,992, of whom 11,610 were killed, 44,426 wounded and 8,956 missing. The figures should help keep the war in perspective.

By trees wind-troubled in the dusk I stood
Despairing how harsh time, like winter, mars
All thriving things despite their hardihood;
How beauty, at her finding, fades and fars;
But still I saw the fingers of the wood
Wind-striving after stars.

BRANSON BLAKE

America At War

By Selden Menefee

On Postwar Germany

Fear has been expressed, especially among our European allies, that the American public is not prepared to deal realistically with Germany when the war is over. With Allied troops already in France, the question of whether we are likely to be over-sentimental about postwar Germany is an important one.

The public opinion polls explain some of this concern. Three-quarters of us think that the present German government is our real enemy; only one-quarter includes the German people as well in the enemy camp. Many of the more tolerant three-quarters might be too easily satisfied with a change of government in Germany which would not thoroughly uproot the war machine.

Two-thirds of us think that "most of the people living in Germany would like to get rid of their Nazi leaders now," although only one-third think that they could really do so if they set about it, according to a recent poll by the National Opinion Research Center.

Princeton's Survey

Moreover, when Princeton University's Office of Public Opinion Research asked a cross-section of the public how they would treat the Germans after the war, 61 percent said, "treat them kindly and with consideration," another 19 percent wanted "kindness backed by firm treatment," and only 12 percent advocated an "eye for an eye" revenge on the Germans.

A Gallup poll about the same time (late in 1942) showed that almost two-thirds of us favored telling the German people that if they lose the war we will protect them from vengeance of people in the countries they have conquered. Such sympathy is viewed as sentimentality by the people of occupied countries.

Much light has been cast on this whole question by a new book dealing entirely with public opinion on postwar issues, Jerome S. Bruner's "Mandate From the People." It is a book that should be read by every policy-making government official, and especially by every member of Congress who wants to be elected—and reelected after the war is over.

The pattern of our opinions regarding Germany, as analyzed by Dr. Bruner, indicates that despite our desire to be humane, we are not likely to coddle either Germany or the Nazis. If John Q. Public writes the peace, or has a hand in it, it will be a hard-boiled peace.

Foundation for Firm Peace

Our basic ideas are these:

Germany should be punished, fully and severely, for breaking the peace. The Nazi leaders should be tried and executed; the German army should be permanently demobilized, and Germany should be occupied by Allied forces for several years; Germany should be stripped of all her conquests, and made to pay at least some reparations to make up for the destruction she has visited on her victims. All of these steps are supported by a large majority of Americans.

The reason for our willingness to deal drastically with Germany, despite our sympathy for the German people, lies in a fear that Germany will rebuild her armed might. A Gallup poll last fall showed that almost three-quarters of us thought that Germany would start preparing for another war if she loses.

This time Americans want no promises of leniency, no "fourteen points." They vote eight to one for an unconditional surrender policy, although only half of them understand accurately what the term means.

A majority of those with opinions feel that the Versailles Treaty had something to do with the present war, NORC found last month. More than a quarter felt that Germany was treated too leniently, only 18 per cent that she was dealt with too harshly. Three out of four believe, in any case, that the settlement after this war should be more severe than last time.

There is less preponderance of opinion on the question of forcing Germany to send workers to rebuild homes and industries in the countries laid waste by the Nazi armies. The January Fortune Survey showed 46 per cent in favor of this step and 32 per cent opposed; and in May an NORC poll showed 51 per cent in favor and 41 per cent opposed.

Against Dismemberment

Americans voice opposition to the dismemberment of Germany by a two-to-one majority. The figure increases sharply with education; NORC found little more than half of those with only grade school training, but three-fourths of those who had been to college were opposed.

A similar majority is opposed to any policy which would prevent the Germans from rebuilding their steel, chemical and automotive industries, Fortune found.

The real danger, though, so far as public opinion is concerned, is not that we will be too lenient with Germany. Rather, it is that we may be unrealistic about collecting cash reparations, in spite of our experience in the last war; or that we may become apathetic about the settlement once the fighting is over, leaving it to "experts" who will turn out to be politicians rather than statesmen in the end.

Road To Minsk

By Barnet Nover

The Red Army Smashes Ahead

"THE ROAD TO MINSK lies open," says a jubilant dispatch from the Eastern Front.

Thus, in less than a week after the Red Army had launched its offensive in the Vitebsk area, the so-called Fatherland Line, guarding the northern approaches to Warsaw and Berlin, has gone the way of the Atlantic Wall.

Smashed at both ends through the capture of Vitebsk and Zhlobin, it is now cracking in the center and through the great gaps thus formed a Russian force estimated at one million men is surging westward with incredible speed.

THE SPECTACLE we are witnessing on the Eastern Front is 1941 in reverse with the Germans finding themselves in the position the Russians found themselves three years ago.

But the differences between the situation today and what it was during those critical summer and fall months of 1941 are greater and more significant than the similarities.

In 1941 and 1942 the Russians carried out a stupendous retreat the purpose of which was to trade space for time. In the process a tremendously important area was lost. But the Russians did gain time and time proved of the essence. Without it they could not have marshaled the great resources of Russia's hinterland, mobilized their reserves or derived any benefits from the aid which Britain and America were anxious to extend and ultimately did extend in abundant measure.

But Germany today has little space to give up and what she has to spare will not vouchsafe her the time she needs. Time is no longer fighting with her but against her.

THE RESOURCES of the Reich were never adequate for the task of world conquest which Hitler had in mind. He had first to draw on the resources of a continent.

In the years after Anschluss and Munich, Germany's war-making capacity was enhanced through the acquisition of an enormous volume of loot from Czechoslovakia, Poland, Denmark, Norway, the Low Countries, France, Finland and the Balkans.

The continent was stripped bare of raw materials, foodstuffs, industrial capacity, manpower, in order that Germany might continue the struggle for domination. Certainly without these additional resources it is doubtful whether Germany could have fought on as long as she did once the military tide had begun to turn against her.

Already Germany has been at war six months longer than she was at war the last time; her total casualties have been far greater than then, and the war has been brought home to the Reich itself in far more immediate and effective fashion than was the case in 1914-18.

NOW with Russian power in full flood, with the Allied forces in the south and the west constantly being reinforced by new arrivals from America, Germany's needs are not less but greater. Yet it is precisely at this time and under these circumstances that Germany finds her territories shrinking, her manpower reserves declining, her resources increasingly limited.

The more the Germans are forced to retreat from the positions they have managed to hold until now the worse off they are both relatively and absolutely.

There was a time, some months ago, when a wholesale retreat by the German armies in the east might have strengthened the German position by enabling the German high command to economize on manpower through the establishment of a shorter line.

For reasons of prestige, Hitler could not permit such a retreat to be made. Instead orders were given to the German troops to hold every position as long as they could. In the process, indispensable German reserves were used up. But that did not enable the Reich to retain all of its conquests.

TODAY Germany is in the same relative position she was in the summer of 1918.

Then, as now, she was still in possession of a formidable army, an army which the Allies deemed capable of waging defensive war for a long time. In fact, the Allied commanders were in agreement that the war would go on into 1919 before the coup de grace could be given the Kaiser's legions.

Germany's defensive capacity today is not being minimized. The publication of the Allied casualty figures in Italy and Normandy makes it clear how dangerous it would be at this stage to underestimate the lethal power which still resides in the Wehrmacht. But now, as in 1918, Germany's difficulties are increasing in geometrical ratio. The day of total collapse may not be very far off.

Texas Elections

My loyalty to the President, to which you refer in your editorial of June 22, cannot be affected by any interpretation you may place upon it.

But so that the inferences and innuendoes of that editorial, in so far as they apply to me and Texas, may be stamped as the lies that they are, I will say that I had no part, either directly or indirectly, in the plans for or proceedings of the Texas State Democratic Convention. I was not consulted, directly or indirectly, on the choice of delegates to the National Convention or the electors of the State of Texas. I had no foreknowledge of the resolutions to be offered at or adopted by the Texas State Democratic Convention.

World War III

There have been rumors lately that the United Nations may come to an "understanding" with the German Junker general staff. To do so would be to underwrite World War III, since these Junkers—by their own words—are planning revenge.

The following excerpts are taken from the November 28, 1943, issue of the French underground newspaper Combat. In February, 1942, General Stuelpnagel, the Junker general in command of the army of occupation in France and one of the German war criminals of the last war, reported:

"A temporary defeat is no great tragedy if we succeed in gaining a greater margin of economic and demographic superiority than we had before 1939, by piling up ruin and destroying men and material in enemy and neighboring territory. If we achieve this, the war will have been useful, for we shall then be able to resume it in the military field under much better conditions.

"The conquest of the world will necessitate many stages, but the main thing is for us to have economic and mechanical potentialities that are greater than the enemy's. With the war treasure we have accumulated and the human lives we have annihilated (two generations), with the destruction of neighboring industries, and what we have saved of our own industries, we shall be in a better position to win the war 25 years from now than we were in the summer of 1939. Thus the present war will be a victory for us, since we will have taken a great step on our road to domination.

"We do not have to fear peace conditions similar to those which we would have imposed, for our enemies will always be divided and disunited. The world cannot be conquered in one war."

Silver For India

In your editorial of June 16, entitled "Silver Loan," you say, "The Treasury has found a new use for its idle silver by agreeing to ship one hundred million ounces to India under a lend-lease agreement."

In considering the Government's need for money and the monetary use of the Treasury's stock of idle silver, you might tell your readers why it was necessary "to circumvent the provisions of the Silver Purchase Act" and keep approximately one-half of the silver bought under the mandatory provisions of this law idle, while the other half was put to use as money at a tremendous saving in interest to the American people, and a profit in the form of silver seigniorage amounting to $820,700,000. If the first 1,477,659,945 ounces, now in circulation as money, can be used at such a tremendous profit, why was it necessary to circumvent the provisions of the Silver Purchase Act by keeping the second 1,253,307,039 ounces idle, when there was full authority in law to use all the silver purchased by the Treasury as money at its coinage value of $1.29 per ounce, which would give the Treasury an additional profit of 887 million dollars, to say nothing in the saving in interest to the money users of this country.

Today silver is selling in India for $1.05 per ounce despite the fact that the British government for India has demonetized the standard silver rupee and made a 50 per cent alloy rupee legal tender. And now our Government is turning over 100 million ounces of our silver to the British government for India to be coined and put into circulation at full coinage value, all the profits between the difference in the price credited to our Government on the lend-lease books and the coinage value going to the British.

The Treasury is doing this at a time when the Federal Reserve Banks are inflating the volume of our unredeemable paper money by the billions, every dollar of which is loaned to the Government or business at interest. The Treasury is doing this while the Government is beating the tocsin to buy bonds and more bonds, and scraping the barrel to find a little more taxation money, while we have the equivalent of $1,750,000,000 in good money metal all bought and paid for—money that is plenty good enough for the British, which our Treasury for some mysterious reason refuses to use.

Why do you tell your readers, "That this time it (the United States Treasury) has found a handy device for making idle silver hoards useful"? And, when did "silver become a sterile silver hoard in India"?

Separatism In Hannover

By Paul Winkler

New German Disunity

According to Stockholm reports, 2300 separatists have been arrested in the German province of Hannover, under the accusation of being members of the Welfen, a political group with the aim of establishing Hannover as an independent German state. Little attention has been paid to this news, yet it has every earmark of authenticity, for the Welf, or Guelph, movement, which is profoundly anti-Prussian, has deep roots in Hannover.

Hannover, a small "Prussian" province of less than 3,500,000 inhabitants, was an independent kingdom until 1866, when it was annexed to Prussia by force. The last King, George V, a member of the Welf family, never accepted the annexation as final, and neither did many of his subjects. From his place of exile (Hietzing, near Vienna) he appealed vainly to the European powers to restore the freedom of Hannover until his death in 1878. Some 850,000 Hannoverians, most of them liberal anti-Prussian citizens, signed a petition to back up their King's pleas, but without effect.

Secret Government

The Hannoverians did not restrict their efforts to entreaties and petitions. They organized, three-quarters of a century ago, what today we would call an underground movement. It was described as the "secret movement" of the country, and its leader was unknown. Each of the 10 districts into which Hannover was divided was also headed by a man whose identity was kept secret. The organization infiltrated the communications, telegraph, railway and administrative services. It had its military group, headed by about 100 young army officers and 1000 noncommissioned officers, who had refused to take the oath of loyalty to Prussia. This early underground had as its purpose the leading of a revolt against Prussia whenever some outside power might be found to help the Hannoverians and make their bid for independence something else than a foolhardy and suicidal venture.

But help never came. By the turn of the century, the Welf movement seemed to have disappeared. The younger generation grew up under an educational system that flaunted the glories of Prussia and paid scant attention to Hannover. But the reappearance of the Welf today shows the Prussian indoctrination was not completely successful.

Not Monarchists

Although the Hannoverian separatists are still calling themselves Welfen, that does not necessarily mean that they are monarchists, desirous of restoring the Welf royal family to the throne. Not only monarchists, but also the 1848 republicans, backed up Georve V in his courageous stand of 1866 against the Prussians; and as a result the term lost its quality of describing supporters of the royal house to take on the broader meaning of covering all these who thought as the royal house did about the Prussian question.

If any of the separatists did consider returning a Welf King to the throne, that would automatically lead them to the British royal family, which is the Welf line (in fact, until the last war, the official title of the British royalty was the House of Hannover, which was changed to the House of Windsor because of the war).

Prussian War

The constant fear of the rule of George V, the last King of Hannover, was that Prussia would try to absorb his realm and he sought to support himself against his powerful neighbor by seeking protection from Austria. But in June 1866, Bismarck decided to march against the Austrian government; and his first step was to send an ultimatum to Hannover: either that state could enter into an alliance with Prussia against Austria or Prussia would consider herself at war with Hannover. Supported by his ministers, who resented the treacherous aggressiveness of Prussia as much as he did, the King rejected the alliance, and the war was on.

The conflict was short. Prussia poured in overwhelming forces, and Hannover had to capitulate before an army three times the size of her own.

The formal annexation of Hannover to Prussia occurred on September 28, 1866. Bismarck offered great material advantages to George V to recognize it (which would have meant, no doubt, the end of all Hannoverian resistance to Prussian rule), but the King refused. Bismarck revenged himself by confiscating the family fortune of the Welf house, the famous Welfenschatz, and using it as a secret fund to promote the expansion of Prussia.

The resistance of the King, which thus far has appeared to have been a useless holding to principles, may be bearing its fruits today; for that example may have kept alive the anti-Prussian spirit of the Welfen which has just been manifested again. It is only one of the anti-Prussian traditions still existent in various parts of Germany, which may be due for revival under the shock of defeat—and which may offer to the Allies the chance to apply propaganda for the resuscitation in Germany of the democratic spirit, apparently long conquered but perhaps still in existence here and there, waiting to be enlisted in the struggle against Prussianism and Pan-Germanism.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Agreement With De Gaulle

WITH CHERBOURG in our hands, the western allies are no longer on a French beachhead. They are in France. The solidarity of our alliance with the Soviet Union, the skill and intelligence of the British-American team, the valor and the martial quality of our new armies, the reality of the French resistance, have been tested and proved.

LIPPMANN

These mighty events, as they continue to unfold, will now shape the political decisions which have to be taken during and after the war. They have already begun to shape them. Our relations with France, which 10 days ago seemed to have sunk to their lowest and meanest point, have taken a decided, and it may even be a radical, turn for the better. Though we had been unable to reach a formula of agreement with General de Gaulle and the French Committee, agreement is developing out of the necessities and the inevitabilities of the situation itself. For as a matter of fact the civil government of liberated French territory is in the hands of the representatives of the committee, and the famous Fighting French general, Pierre-Joseph Koenig, has been recognized by General Eisenhower as the commander of all the resistance behind the German lines.

THE IMPORTANCE of these developments can be measured when we remember what was the most cogent reason given for not agreeing in advance to these arrangements. It was that we had intelligence reports that inside of France there were organized resistance groups, indispensable to the invasion, who did not recognize and would oppose the leadership of General de Gaulle and the authority of the committee. These reports, of which much has been made in Washington, were never given serious credit by the British and other governments, which operate older and more experienced intelligence services in France than we, who are still amateurs in these matters, have been able to improvise.

General Eisenhower cannot afford to be misinformed on a matter of this sort. He has for his use the combined intelligence services of all the United Nations. He has, moreover, had nearly three weeks to judge the military importance of the French resistance. It has played a telling part, at frightful risk, in obstructing the German effort to bring up new divisions to attack the beachhead. In accepting the Gaullist general as the commander of all French resistance, General Eisenhower has judged that there are no active patriot forces which are incapable of working with General de Gaulle. That being the case, then the civil administration of liberated territory can be placed nowhere else but under the direction of the committee—working, as it is now working in Normandy, in close and friendly cooperation with the Allied commander.

A WISE MAN has said that we must not open a quarrel between the present and the past, lest the future be imperilled. If we take that injunction to heart in Washington, in Algiers, and in London, we can still hope to raise the political relations of France, Britain, and America to a plane which is worthy of the heroism and the grandeur of their combined action.

We can do away with the brooding and envenomed suspicions, the smears and the slanders, which are a disgrace to our common cause. We can do away with them, and we can then go forward together through France into Germany. For if we can work in harmony where the danger is greatest, it is unbelievable that we should not be able to agree in the security of Washington and of Algiers.

LET THE pedants and the metaphysicians argue whether the authority which directs the French resistance and administers liberated territory is or is not a recognized provisional government. If it is not, then it is something much more important, whatever we choose to call it and whatever it chooses to call itself. It is a great historical force; it is as Mr. Churchill has said, the fourth greatest power in arms against the enemy. We cannot afford to go on quarreling with this power, or it with us, nor can we afford to become more and more estranged. It is a condition and not a theory that we are dealing with.

HAVING FOUND that we can agree in practice even though we could not agree in theory, let us turn our attention from the transient issues to the great relations of France, Britain, and America.

What is it that we want of one another, and must have not only now but in the years to come? We want to make sure that never again shall we become so separated that we can be mortally threatened and defeated one by one. We know now from the two bitter wars of this century that France, Britain, and America, the three leading powers facing the North Atlantic, have a common fate and will, no matter what they think they intend to do in time of peace, find themselves allies in any great war where the survival of any one of them is at issue.

That is the rock upon which Anglo-French-American relations have henceforth to be established. That is the master principle which must guide each of them in its dealings with the others. If we have the insight to recognize this principle and the wisdom to adhere to it, no problem is insoluble among us, no dispute is irreconcilable.

Washington Calling

Hoover Steps Aside

Chicago.—AT THE END of his speech on Tuesday night Herbert Hoover publicly surrendered any claim to leadership of the Republican Party. Standing for the third time under the blazing convention lights as an ex-President, he did what he has never done before — step aside for a younger generation.

CHILDS

What he said in his swan song would be unimportant, since it was hail and farewell, if it weren't for two things. First, his speech seemed to me to reflect the confused thinking, not merely of Mr. Hoover, but of a great many of us on the vital issue of world collaboration. We want to have our cake—a great big cake with the best raisins in it—and yet we want to eat it, too.

SOME EVIDENCE of that same confusion was in the GOP foreign policy plank with its last-minute bow in the direction of Illinois Senator "Curly" Brooks. The insistence that "any treaty or agreement" have the approval of two-thirds of the Senate was what Middle Western Senators were determined to tack onto the Connally resolution. But Hoover exhibited in an extreme form the dualism that colors so much American thinking. "The hot fires of nationalism" rising out of the "emotions of this war" have put an end to any hopes for "a world supergovernment, no matter how idealistic," said Hoover.

All we can hope for is "cooperation between independent sovereign nations." Yet a little later on he lambastes the Roosevelt Administration for playing power politics at Teheran. If President Roosevelt were to defend Teheran, I'm sure he would say he was working toward "cooperation between independent sovereign nations."

THEN WITH some indignation Hoover refers to the independence of Poland. The United States, he says, will emerge from this war the strongest military power in the world, and our capacity to "bring freedom to the world must not be frittered away."

But how are we to "bring freedom to the world?" Are we going to war with Russia to keep Poland independent?

I happen to know on the best authority that Roosevelt told Stalin at Teheran that we would not fight him over Poland. He was simply stating a reality—that the American people would not go into another war to assure the independence of Poland within certain borders. Would Hoover disagree? Would any Republican?

TWO DIFFERENT Americans were taking turns in speaking all through Hoover's speech. One was the American conscious of our new world power and proposing, as did Winston Churchill, who certainly knows his power politics, that the world be divided into three spheres of influence for maintenance of the peace. The other American was the idealist talking of freedom, of liberation for all peoples.

One was the Quaker boy from West Branch, Iowa, the earnest young executive who fed starving Europe. The other was the international mining engineer, the successful businessman, the statistician who appraises trends and looks dubiously on dreamy-eyed proposals for a world state.

In all of this Hoover typifies—let's face it candidly—so much that is American. We talk about world collaboration, but a great many Americans haven't yet faced up to the fact that it means certain sacrifices.

The second reason why Hoover's speech is important, even though it's his long-delayed official exit, is his relation with Governor Dewey. When Hoover talks privately about this, he splutters with indignation at printed reports that he would have a place in the Dewey Cabinet. Nothing, he says, could be further from his desires or intentions. He denies, too, that he has had any very active part in promoting his nomination.

As leader of the younger generation in his party, Dewey is going to have to assert his leadership positively and hopefully if he raises this convention out of the apathy that lies over it as the pall of heat lies over the city. And in doing so, he may have to repudiate the last generation, including his good friend, Herbert Hoover.

VPI Board Designates Group To Study Reported Shortage

Richmond, Va., June 28 (AP).—A committee named by the Board of Visitors of Virginia Polytechnic Institute will make a study of an audit report by State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs that the State had lost $29,304.16 in the operations of the V. P. I. aeronautics department thruogh "manipulations of John H. Wright," former director, and deals with the Blacksburg Flying Service.

Wright left Blacksburg as director of the department in November, 1942, and has been serving as a major in the U. S. Army Air Corps.

The audit, submitted to Governor Darden and the VPI Board, charged that Wright sold state-owned property "without the funds having been paid into the commonwealth treasury" and that he personally benefited from the operations of the Blacksburg Flying Service when the cost of carrying out certain contracts "was largely borne by the commonwealth . . . without financial settlement having been made therefor."

Wright, the report said, acquired interest in the Blacksburg Flying Service in August, 1942, and the contracts referred to were said to have been made between the Federal government and the Flying Service to offer instruction in cross-country flying.

The audit said the "net charge to John H. Wright, exclusive of accountability in connection with the Blacksburg Flying Service is $13,936.57, and the accountability of the Blacksburg Flying Service is $15,367.59" or a total of $29,304.16 "to be accounted for."

Col. James P. Woods, chairman of the VPI Board of Visitors, announced as members of the committee, Robert Russell, Rustburg; Dr. Julian A. Burruss, president of VPI, and Allen T. Eskridge, mayor of Pulaski, all members of the board.

Loyal M' Arthur Backer Mars Dewey Sweep

By Mary Spargo

Chicago, Ill., June 28.—By main force, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan prevented a Wisconsin delegate from putting the name of Gen. Douglas MacArthur before the GOP convention today, but the man intended to second the general's nomination remained a lone standout against the Dewey sweep.

Grant A. Ritter of Beloit, 54-year-old Wisconsin dairy farmer, who prevented Nominee Thomas E. Dewey from receiving the unanimous indorsement of his party, said here that he will now not only vote for Dewey but work for his election.

Irked by Failure

A native of Chicago, Ritter was irked when Dr. John P. Koehler, Wisconsin delegate from Milwaukee, was foiled in his attempt to nominate MacArthur.

As Koehler reached the platform, Vandenberg saw him, grabbed him by the lapels of his coat, and tried to argue him out of making the nomination. "This nomination would be humiliating to MacArthur," Vandenberg warned.

"I don't feel that way," Koehler returned.

Vandenberg held Koehler in conversation until after Wisconsin was called and passed so that he could not reach the microphone.

Just Likes MacArthur

Ritter, after the vote was taken, was doing little talking but he said: "I do not belong to any organization such as America First or the Bataan group. I just like General MacArthur, that's all. "I think General MacArthur is a very fine man, a man of the highest principles and finest character.

"Dewey is a nice gentleman just like a great many other nice entlemen."

Bill Giving Veterans Job Preference Signed

President Roosevelt signed yesterday a bill giving preference in Government employment to honorably discharged servicemen, their widows and the wives of disabled veterans of any United States war.

The measure gives statutory effect to existing civil service regulations giving service-connected disabled veterans a 10-point preference and nondisabled veterans a 5-point preference in competition for Federal jobs.

Job Control Plan Effective Saturday

The part voluntary cooperation will play in the Nation's new job-control program is highlighted in a statement the War Manpower Commissioon sent to its field offices yesterday.

It outlines over-all policies and standards which WMC's area and regional directors will be required to follow in recruiting labor for war work under the priority referral program. The plan, providing that all male jobs-seekers clear through U. S. Employment Service offices or approved agencies, goes into effect throughout the country Saturday.

The statement to field offices makes it clear that the referral system has no provision for compulsory assignment of any workers to a job. It emphasizes that men should be directed to jobs for which they are best suited and for which the wages are in line with those they have been receiving.

Both workers and employers are to be given maximum freedom of selection, and job applicants should "not be denied successive job opportunities" unless local conditions warrant a limitation.

Even where this is the case, limitations must not apply, WMC said, upon the number of jobs of substantially equal or greater manpower urgents which may be offered. Also, a worker may refuse a job and be referred to another if he has good cause for turning down an assignment.

Even where an applicant rejects a job without good cause, he would not lose his right to be referred to job openings thereafter, WMC said. But selection will be confined to jobs on the urgency list the make-up of which probably will not vary a great real, it was explained.

WMC said that while there will be many local adaptations of the referral program, basic policies outlined in the field statement must be adhered to everywhere in the country.

Nazis Lose 75,000 In France, 125,000 In Italy and Russia

By the United Press

The Germans have suffered more than 200,000 casualties on three fronts since the invasion of France, a German broadcast to the Wehrmacht said yesterday.

In Normandy, 75,000 men were lost, including 32,000 prisoners.

In the six weeks of the Allied offensive in Italy, the Nazis lost from 80,000 to 100,000 killed, wounded and taken prisoner.

In the battle of Vitebsk, 30,000 men were lost, of whom 20,000 were killed and the remainder captured, the radio commentator said.

First Nazi Prisoners From France Reach U.S.

The Army announced yesterday the first German prisoners captured in Normandy have reached the United States.

The number was not disclosed. They have been sent to various prison camps in this country.

Convention Snaps Bricker Into 2d Place

By Ben W. Gilbert

Chicago, June 28.—A well-greased Republican steam roller today nominated John Bricker for Vice President in record time and without dissent, eliminating threat of a possible party row over second place on the ticket caused by the refusal of Gov. Earl Warren of California to accept.

Bricker, serving his third consecutive term as Ohio Governor, was catapulted into the vice presidential nomination after he appeared before the convention and announced his withdrawal from the presidential race.

Exactly 41 minutes after Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was acclaimed the presidential nominee, Bricker had received the 1057 votes of the convention for the Vice Presidency. No other candidate was nominated.

Bricker Gets Ovation

Making a surprise appearance before the convention after Gov. Dwight Griswold of Nebraska placed Dewey in nomination, Bricker, 6 feet 1 inch, with wavy white hair, stood for 15 minutes while the convention delegates gave him an ovation.

The demonstration lasted two and a half times longer than the one given Dewey, and was more enthusiastic, as Bricker explained he was withdrawing from the presidential race, some of his supporters chorused "No," but it was clear that they intended a tribute.

"A thousand times I have said I am personally more interested in defeating the absolutism of the New Deal than I am in ever being President of these United States," Bricker told the throng, amid cheers.

He Plumps for Dewey

Plumping for Dewey, whom he had attacked for failing to acknowledge being a candidate, Bricker stated: "Tom Dewey will become the gallant leader of the Republican hosts that will free this administration and America from the clutches of bureaucracy next January.

"I come here conscious that the great majority want to nominate the Goveernor of New York. I believe in party organization and this is the legally constituted body of my party. Republican victory is necessary to preserve my party and the two-party system."

Representative Everett Dirksen of Illinois then withdrew as a vice presidential candidate, and asked the convention to make the ticket Dewey and Bricker.

Gov. Edward Martin of Pennsylvania placed Bricker's name formally in nomination.

Martin said he was a man of "real courage—imbued with true American ideals—who will preside over the Senate with dignity and understanding."

Bricker had been making a hard and expensive, but failing fight for the first place nomination. Dewey managers automatically turned to him to fill the second place hole. Otherwise, the convention might have been deluged with favorite son candidates, possibly precipitating a bitter floor fight.

He Was Born on a Farm

Bricker was born on September 6, 1893, with a twin sister, Ella, on a farm in Pleasant Township, Madison County, Ohio.

He studied law at Ohio State University, but interrupted his legal education to become a first lieutenant in the Army's Chaplain Corps in 1918. From 1923 to 1927, he served as assistant attorney general of Ohio assigned to the State Public Utilities Commission. From 1929 to 1932 he was a member of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio. In 1933 he was elected attorney general of Ohio, a post he held until 1936.

In 1938 he was elected Governor of Ohio, and was reelected in 1940 and 1942.

One of the more conservative of the party leaders, he is regarded as leaning toward the so-called nationalist, rather than internationalist, point of view on foreign policy questions.

Tall, Stunning

Mrs. Bricker Charms All At Chicago

By Christine Sadler

Chicago, June 28.—If Ohio's Governor should become Vice President, the Nation's second lady probably would be popular. Delegates and visitors to this convention have been much impressed by Mrs. John W. Bricker.

Time and again the remark is heard that she "would be a second Grace Coolidge" if her husband became President.

Tall and stunningly dressed, Mrs. Bricker is charming and friendly. She has campaigned throughout the country with Governor Bricker during the last three months. She likes to make an informal speech when the occasion calls for it.

She has shaken more hands than any other woman at the convention, and apparently enjoyed it. Visitors to Bricker headquarters, where she and her son Jack have been much in evidence, usually have come away saying, "I surely like Mrs. Bricker and think she is beautiful." Jack, who is 13, is the only child of the Brickers.

Other women who would come into prominence with a Republican election include several workers at Dewey headquarters.

They include Jane Todd, New York Assemblywoman, who may be named to head the women's division of the Dewey campaign, and Mary Donlon, New York industrial commissioner, who has been vice chairman of the resolutions committee.

Greenbelt Pilot Promoted And Decorated

Red Cross Director Orville Roberts of 4-A Ridge rd., Greenbelt, has left on an assignment to an unannounced destination, following several months in this area after completing a tour of duty in the North African sector.

His son, Robert, now stationed in England, was promoted recently to first lieutenant and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Roberts family learned. He had previously won the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters and he has completed 30 air missions and has elected to stay for more combat work, his family was told.

Director Roberts' wife, Mrs. Raebelle Roberts, has resigned as a teacher in the elementary school and the family has moved to a farm recently purchased on the Eastern Shore.

Tank, Shell Needs Delay Termination Of Stove Rationing

Sharply stepped-up military demands for tanks and heavy artillery shells have caused indefinite deferment of plans for removing cooking and heating stoves from rationing, William Y. Elliott, director of the Office of Civilian Requirements, said yesterday.

Detroit, June 28 (AP).—Lagging for many months, heavy-duty military trucks have been given a new priority rating to step up production.

Heavy-duty military trucks are to be accorded the same "special directive treatment" heretofore given to the manufacture of landing craft and heavy artillery in the automotive industry.

Of a projected output this year of 865,000 trucks, slightly more than 209,000 had been finished during the first four months.

War Nearly Over, Ironside Thinks; Caen Fight to Tell

Bury St. Edmunds, Eng., June 28 (U.P.).—Field Marshal Lord Ironside, former chief of the imperial staff, said today "the war is nearly over, I think."

"We broke the line in the last war in July and the enemy never faced us again and we had an armistice on November 11," he said. "Look at the picture now. We have broken the line in Italy and the Germans are not standing.

"In the west, the great fight at Caen-Tilly will decide whether the line is broken or not. Every great war ceases by the fact that men will not fight any more, whatever order is given by a general or a government. When men cease to fight then war is over."

2 Girls Die in Fire

D-Day Supplies Twice Tonnage Pershing Got

By William Frye

Associated Press Staff Writer

Advance shipments for the liberation drive into Europe piled up more than 16 million tons of supplies in Britain in a year, twice the tonnage which General Pershing received during World War I, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervel reported yesterday.

The commanding general of the Army Service Forces said in an interview that preshipment of supplies for the liberation stockpiles began more than 12 months ago, while as long ago as last August 11, the Army began planning in exact detail the restoration of the port of Cherbourg.

Cherbourg "Keyed"

Cherbourg was a "keyed project," said Somervell, and a hint of the staggering planning job that preceded the landings in Normandy was contained in his added comment that there were more than 300 keyed projects of various size and importance.

Complete restoration of the port of Cherbourg, based on the experience at Naples, may take several weeks, Somervell stated, but it will be in use long before than—probably is already in use. And when the work is complete, the port's capacity will have been greatly expanded.

U. S. Learns Lot

The beachhead supply was on a scale which no one would have dreamed was possible, he said.

"We learned an awful lot in our operations in Africa, Sicily and Italy, and the dozens of operations in the Pacific," the general said.

"We learned what could be put across a beach, and how it could be put across. The result has been that, with proper organization and equipment, we landed several times as much as anyone dreamed was possible.

Vatican Approves Dutch Envoy, Resumes Relations

Vatican City, June 28 (U.P.).—The Vatican has resumed diplomatic relations with the Netherlands government in exile at London, it was announced today upon the approval by the Vatican of Jonkheer Marc Willem van Weede, chief of cabinet of the Netherlands foreign office, as minister to the Holy See.

Diplomatic relations between the Netherlands and the Vatican were established during the last war but the Netherlands broke them off in November, 1925.

War Delayed Move

London, June 28 (U.P.).—The Netherlands government said the agreement to resume formal relations dated from August, 1943, but could not be put into effect then "owing to unforeseen developments of the war situation in Italy."

(It was in September, 1943, that Italy left the war, but the Fascists and Germans seized control of all but the southern part.)

Wife Steals Baby After Own Dies To Dupe Marine

San Diego, Calif., June 28 (AP).—Unwilling to disappoint her husband, a Marine, in the South Pacific, Mrs. Helen Kreger, 23, admitted abducting a 2-year-old girl to replace her baby who died at birth, police said today.

The husband was unaware their baby had died, she said. She is held on a kidnapping charge.

Ceiling Prices Put on Potatoes

White potatoes, 1944 crop, were added to the list of community ceiling prices on fresh fruits and vegetables for the week beginning today. California long variety will sell at 5 pounds for 30 cents.

Fresh fruits will remain stable except for cherries, which declined 2½ cents per pound. Snap beans and spinach were reduced 1 cent and 2½ cents per pound and cucumbers and peas were increased 1½ cents and 1 cent each.

Virginians To Fill Wise, Boocock Posts

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—Virginia's national committeeman and committeewoman, Maj. Henry A. Wise and Mrs. Murray Boocock, declined reelection at a delegation caucus this morning and the group was called to meet again later to name their successors.

Regarded as most likely successor to Major Wise was Clarence R. Amalt, of Arlington or Curtis M. Dozier of Richmond.

The delegation's choice for committeewoman is expected to lie between Mrs. B. P. Goad, of Millsville, Carroll County, and Mrs. W. W. Logan of Woodstock.

Wise, leader of the delegate slate which received the official nod of approval of the Republican National Convention's credentials committee yesterday, after a fight for the place bitterly contested by a so called minority group from Virginia, called the first caucus immediately after the seating of his group had been approved.

A portion of the day was set aside by the Virginia delegation for informal conversations which were designed to strengthen solidarity, and were termed by one delegate as "pacification" of the group toward harmonious action.

4th 90-Degree Day In Prospect Here; No Relief in Sight

Washington can look to its fourth day of 90 degree heat today with no relief in sight tomorrow, according to an official Weather Bureau forecast.

The extreme humidity, which was 99 at 8:30 a. m. yesterday, accompanied by fog and a slight drizzle, dropped to 55 at 2:30 p. m. It added to the general desire to yank off neckties and travel around in shorts. Hundreds of people who carried a sheet or a cushion to the park at bedtime, gathered up their belongings and returned to their mattresses as the night cooled.

Summer reasserted itself again during the day as the mercury climbed from 71 at 4:20 a. m. to 90 at 5 p. m.

Official forecast for today is: "Hot and sultry" with temperatures above 90.

Three Abandoned Kittens Find Foster Homes Fast

Washington's housing problem proved no problem at all for the three abandoned kittens pictured in The Post yesterday. At least a dozen families, in the District and Arlington, tendered "adoption" offers and promised the kittens a "good home with nice people."

The foster "parents," selected, according to the order of their calls, were Mrs. Loretta Hazard of 4209 20th st. ne., who said her daughter, Carol Ann, 4, loves pets; Carol Greene, 10, daughter of Mrs. Lawrence W. Greene of 1237 Irving st. nw., and Mrs. Boyce R. Bloton, 20, of 2922 Upton st. nw.

Yanks Beat Browns, 7-2, for 5th Straight

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The British like America's planes, guns, ships, tanks and soldiers but they are very stubborn about their dislike for America's race horses. For 31 years, now, they have been horrified at the idea of recognizing some of America's greatest race horses as thoroughbreds.

POVICH

It has been a sore spot for more than a generation with American breeders whose blood lines have been excluded from England's General Stud Book, the holy scroll of racing's breeding industry. British breeders, alarmed at the progress of American-breds, shoved through the famous Jersey Act that barred registration in the Stud Book to such American lines as Himyar, Domino, Fair Play and his great son, Man O' War.

Cold blood, the English call it, despite the proven abilities of American stallions. There was a token protest recently by the Thoroughbred Club of America against the forbidden entry of this country's horses with blood lines that are "tainted" in the British view, into the Stud Book. It will probably have no effect.

What may, eventually, bring about acceptance of American blood lines by the General Stud Book, according to the Thoroughbred Record, is World War II. The British may be driven to a change of viewpoint.

The British, who used to draw upon France and other countries in the continent for the perpetuation of their thoroughbred lines, now face an acute shortage of stallions and mares, writes a correspondent of the Thoroughbred Record. He says, very reasonably:

"I should like to point out that unless there is some change, we, in England, will shortly be faced with the alternatives of inbreeding far too closely on four or five lines of blood—or ignoring the Stud Book and running the risk of bringing it into complete disrepute.

"During the 10 years before the present war, we became more and more dependent on the importation of animals of stout French blood for an outcross which could be used for the British lines of Phalaris, Gainsborough, Tetrarch and Son-in-law. This source has been denied to us already for 4½ years, and it is unlikely that we shall be able to resume these importations on any scale for at least 20 years after the war."

This Britisher, then, plumps for closer cooperation with the American breeding industry. "Surely, we must look to some other country for the necessary outcrosses, and the strides which American breeding has taken in recent years from their importation of the best French and British blood make it seem paradoxical that we still refuse entry to our Stud Book to such a great staying lines as Americans have produced."

The solution, it is suggested, is a new Stud Book. "Could not some form of International Stud Book be set up in which would be automatically included all names in the English and American stud books and, after the end of the war, the broadening of the basis to include animals of French and other nationalities?"

Not all American breeders, however, are greatly annoyed by the holier-than-thou viewpoint of the British Stud Book. The American breeding industry is now at the point where it can come very closely to standing on its own feet as a result of the steady importation of the best French and British blood. The realists say, the heck with the General Stud Book.

Exterminator, the grand old gelding of the American turf, lost a race recently, shortly after his twenty-ninth brithday party at which he wolfed a cake made of mash and decorated with carrots. The winner of 50 of his 100 starts, finished second to a pony—and don't think he wasn't trying.

It seems that Peanuts, the pony that has been Exterminator's constant companion at the Kilmer Stud, was ailing and another, younger, pony was experimentally introduced into the paddock. Spying the interloper, Exterminator laid back his ears and made for him. It was an exciting race while it lasted but the pony won the gallop to the safety of another paddock.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt, millionaire president of the Pimlico track, now commanding a PT boat in the South Pacific, rarely gambled on the races. But he has some winnings awaiting him in Australia, we learn. He is the winner of 5 pounds (about $16) in a Queensland lottery.

Griffith Looks for Sellout At July 7 War Relief Game

If the individual efforts and contributions of Clark C. Griffith mean anything, the War Relief baseball game involving the Washington Nationals and American League-leading St. Louis Browns at Griffith Stadium a week from tomorrow night, July 7, will be a complete sell-out.

This game is being cosponsored by the Touchdown Club and Department of the District of Columbia American Legion, but actually is being made possible through the enthusiastic cooperation of baseball's Old Fox.

GRIFFITH

Griffith, determined to have this game measure up to the standard of that of other cities, not only is donating the ball park, its set-up, lights and other facilities, but also is paying his way into his own ball park. He, too, is jealously scaling the stadium to provide the most available seating capacity.

"This is the greatest sports town in the country, and this is our chance to prove it," Griffith declared yesterday. "I'm rooting hard for a complete sell-out and 100 per cent paid attendance for July 7, and I believe that Washingtonians will put this game over."

Griffith, the man whose Ball and Bat Fund established him as an outstanding friend of the armed services in World War I, is performing even more services in this war. Not only has he again helped make baseball equipment available to our fighting men, but his cooperation in making his ball park available for worthy causes has provided tens of thousands of dollars for the war effort.

Tickets for the War Relief benefit game are enjoying a good advance sale at Griffith Stadium. Reservations are being taken through Dupont 6333.

Yankees Are Looking Better, Says Mack

Philadelphia, June 28 (AP).—Connie Mack says the Yankees look better now than they have at any time this season.

"I think Joe McCarthy must have had a talk with them," he said. "They're hustling. They're getting better pitching and hitting and they're all playing as though they really wanted to win."

Asked if he thought the champions would repeat, he replied "I've always liked the Yanks and they're not very far behind, but the Browns are certainly going good, aren't they? And so are the White Sox."

New Yorkers Led by Etten And Lindell

New York, June 28 (AP).—Atley Donald pitched the New York Yankees to their fifth straight victory today as the World Champions defeated the St. Louis Browns, 7-2.

Donald limited the Browns to eight hits to reduce the gap between the league leaders and the Yankees to 3½ games.

Johnny Lindell and Nick Etten were the big guns of the Yankees. They combined their doubles to score the first Yankee run in the second innnig, Etten counting on a single by Oscar Grimes.

After the Browns tied the score in the top half of the third, the Yankees went ahead to stay, on some jittery playing by the Browns. With one out, Centerfielder Milton Byrnes dropped an easy fly ball for a two-base error. Bud Metheny was retired, but three successive singles by Herschel Martin, Lindell and Etten plus an error by Catcher Mike Hayworth gave the Yankees three unearned runs.

The New Yorkers added two more in the fourth on a base on balls and George Stirnweiss' inside-the-park home run, a fly ball that eluded both Byrnes and Al Zarilla.

The defeat was Bob Muncrief's fourth of the season, his first since May 21, in the same park, Muncrief had won six straight. It was also the Browns first loss after four straight, and Donald's third conquest of the league leaders.

Fighting Dor Wins $10,000 Aqueduct Top

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., June 28 (AP).—Fighting Don, a juvenile colt, which evidently inherited considerable of the speed possessed by his sire, Fighting Fox, remained unbeaten when he breezed off with the Great American Stakes, worth $10,000 to Owner Miss Gertrude Donovan, here today. In making it three for three, the bay flyer covered 6 furlongs in 1:11 4-5 to remain well up along the 2-year-old titular trail.

The flashy youngster, a $3200 yearling bargain, now has earned $13,475 and present plans of his stable call for him to ship to Washington Park for the rich Arlington Futurity. The crowd of 19,521 made him a 2-to-5 favorite over five rivals. The colt, scoring his first stakes triumph, justified those odds.

William Ziegler, jr.'s Esteem, second to Burg-El-Arab (a conspicuous absentee today) in the recent Tremont Stakes, finished second by four lengths, with A. A. Baroni's Top General third.

Fighting Don's time was only one-fifth second slower than Breezing Home's stakes mark, established in the 1942 running.

Twilight Tear Scores Eighth Win in Row

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—Twilight Tear, the Calumet Farm's Speedy Filly, raced to her eighth consecutive triumph today in winning the $10,000 added Princess Doreen Stakes at Arlingtoon Park.

Twilight Tear was ridden by Jockey Conn McCreary under special ruling by the Illinois Racing Board, which allowed the suspended rider to fulfill all his stake engagements. Twilight Tear ran the six furlongs in 1:10 3/5, twofifths of a second off the track record.

The Calumet Farm's Filly, coming from behind, collared the pace setting Bell Song, a 50 to 1 shot, in the stretch drive and won by a length and a half, paying $2.80 to win, with Bell Song paying $17.60 to place.

Buddy Scott Wins

Galveston, Tex., June 27 (AP).—Buddy Scott, Texas heavyweight champion, retained his title last night by winning an unanimous decision in 15 rounds over hard-punching Jack Marshall of Dallas. Marshall weighed 194 pounds, Scott, 188.

Landis Schedules Joint Major Loop Meeting for July 11

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis announced today that a joint meeting of the major leagues to discuss night games and other topics would be held July 11 at the Schenley Hotel, Pittsburgh.

The St. Louis Cardinals of the National League have proposed that clubs be authorized to play their remaining 1944 games at night, except on Sunday, and the Chicago White Sox of the American League have asked authorization to play more night games than presently permitted.

Other subjects that will be up for consideration are the signing of free agents and player contracts.

Andersson Beats Hagg In First Duel

Stockholm, June 28 (AP).—Arne Andersson defeated Gunder Hagg in a 1500-meter race today in the first meeting in two years of Sweden's two top runners.

Andersson turned the 1500 meters in Stockholm Stadium in 3:48.8 to finish ahead of Hagg, who was timed in 3:50.2. Hagg led at the start, but Andersson, who holds the world record of 3:45 for the distance, won with a finishing spurt.

Andersson said the track was good, despite a morning rain. He indicated, however, that the muggy weather prevented a new record being set in the clash of the cinder stars.

Today's victory was Andersson's first over Hagg, he having spurred his countryman to clockings heard round the world in their previous meetings. It was while Hagg was in America last year that Andersson set his 3:45 mark for the 1500 meters, and his 4:02.6 for the mile, eclipsing Hagg's best of 4:04.6

Hagg made his second start of the season in today's clash, his opening effort Sunday being a world record of 8:45.4 for the 2-mile.

Frank Sangalli 'Hard-Luck Player' Of Richmond Club

Richmond, Va., June 28 (AP).—Ubaldo Frank Sangalli, 19-year-old second baseman of the Richmond Colts, apparently has an open field as claimant of the "hard-luck player" of his team. The injury jinx has been riding Sangalli's shoulders since he reported to the Piedmont League leaders at the beginning of spring training.

Sangalli, property of Jersey City, is nursing a fractured right thumb at present and he is not expected to return to the lineup until the middle of July. He sustained the injury in tagging a runner at Newport News June 20.

During spring drills, Frank, who stands 5 feet 7 inches and weighs 150 pounds, injured a finger on his throwing hand. However, he was able to take part in the opener against Newport News April 26 and hammered out three for five, including a double.

Illness forced him to the sidelines May 22. Misfortune caught up with him again at Lynchburg May 27 when he injured his right knee and was relegated to the sidelines until June 7.

Byrd, Cochran Lead Chicago Pro-Am Event

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—Sam Byrd, of Detroit, and Bob Cochran, of St. Louis—The defending pro-amateur team champions—clicked as partners again today for a 138 scoring combination and the early lead in the Chicago Victory National team race.

Byrd came in with a 36-34—70 to better the Edgewater course par of 35-36—71, but his amateur buddy posted a fine 33-35—68.

In the same foursome with Byrd and Cochran were Betty Jane Haemerle, of St. Louis and Capt. R. M. Emmett, commander of the Great Lakes Naval Training Center. Miss Haemerle shot a 42-39—81 while Capt. Emmet had a 45-46—91. The combined score of 151 for Miss Maemerle and Byrd was good for an early second place in the pro-woman combination.

Leading the pro-woman division was Ky Lafloon, of Chicago, with 35-33—68 and Mary Agnes Wall, of Menominee, Mich., with 41-41—82, an aggregate of 150. Playing with them was amateur Steve Kovach of Pittsburgh, who shot a 33-39—72. The Laffon-Kovach total of 140 was good for second place in the pro-amateur bracket.

Jug McSpaden of Philadelphia, leading money winner of the winter circuit, toured the front nine in an amazing 29, six under par.

Minnesota, Michigan Boys In Golf Finals

Toledo, Ohio, June 28 (AP).—Johnny Jenswold of Michigan and Louis Lick of Minnesota today won their way into the finals of the 1944 national intercollegiate golf tournament.

Lick toured the Inverness Country Club course in par as he drubbed Tom Messinger of Michigan, 6 and 5.

Jenswold, the Big Ten champion from Duluth, Minn., was five over par for his semifinal round but trimmed Henry Rampelt of Baldwin Wallace, 3 and 1.

Lick, a St. Paul youth, used only 35 shots on the first nine, although he took three putts on the third hole. Jenswold came from behind to whip Rampelt. The Wolverine star, plagued by trouble, was one down at the end of nine holes. He thereafter squared the match, then won the fifteenth, sixteenth and seventeenth with a bogey, pa nd birdie.

The Sports Patrol:

Tilden, Absent for 14 Years, Returns Again to Forest Hills

By Oscar Fraley
United Press Staff Correspondent

New York, June 28.—Big Bill Tilden returns to the famed center court at Forest Hills this Sunday and it will be a poignant, memory-packed moment as the long-legged guy stretches up into the sky for his first cannonball service on those courts in 14 long years.

Big Bill won't be striving for a title now, as he was the last time he appeared in the green-carpeted arena when Johnny Doeg knocked him out of the 1930 National Championships. He'll just be doing his bit in a Red Cross exhibition.

TILDEN

Yet, in those few, fleeting moments that his legs hold out, Big Bill's slashing racket will blast aside the curtain of time and carry the veteran back across the years. Back to the days when the flesh was as strong as the spirit and Big Bill was the big man not only here but around the world.

Back to Golden Twenties

Back to the golden twenties, shouldering his way through the crowds of ghostly figures . . . Murray . . . Johnston . . . Shimizu . . . Kumage . . . Patterson . . . Anderson . . . Hawkes . . . Cochet . . . Lacoste . . . Borotra. All great names in the tennis world, yet none as great as William T. Tilden 2d.

And as Big Bill saunters down the gravel path from the vine-covered clubhouse to the horseshoe-shaped stadium they'll all be there in his memory. Lindley Murray and Little Bill Johnston, who stopped him in successive years on these same courts in the Nationals. And then felt the sting of his artistry as he blew them off the courts six straight years.

He'll see again those friendly, yet bitter, battles with Little Bill. The bounding pint-sized guy who paired with him to bring the Davis Cup back to America in 1920. That was the same year he beat Little Bill the first of five times in the National finals.

And how the following year they teamed again to hand the Japanese a 5-to-love shellacking on these same courts in the Davis Cup challenge round, sending the little yellow men home empty-handed. And the two years in which they beat the invading Australians on this same sward.

Haunting Recollections

There will be haunting recollections, too, of the fleet Frenchmen who caught him on the downgrade as the explosive power was slipping from his shots. Jeana Rene Lacoste and Jean Borotra, the 1926 finalists in the Nationals, and Henri Cochet, who captured Big Bill's crown in 1928 after Lacoste had worn it two years. But there's a lift, too, in thoughts of 1929 and his comeback right there in the center court.

Seeing those Frenchmen again, as he marches down memory lane, will provide the most solace for the big fellow. Lacoste and Borotra gave him little trouble, but they said that Cochet had his number down through Tilden's final Davis Cup years. From 1927 through 1930 he couldn't take the flying Frenchman but when they finally met again in Paris in 1933 Big Bill blew him off the courts.

That's why the stands will be packed on Sunday when Big Bill Tilden takes to the famed center court once again. For a few moments, while those 51-year-old legs hold out, he'll still be the best in the world.

Macks Defeat Indians, 7 to 3, Escape Cellar

Philadelphia, June 28 (AP).—The Philadelphia Athletics escaped a drop into the American League cellar by taking the first game of their series from the Cleveland Indians, 7 to 3, today.

The winning runs came across on Dick Siebert's home run inside the park with two out and one on in the third.

Don Black struck out 11 Indians and had only one bad inning, the third, when Cleveland scored all its runs in a rally climaxed by Roy Cullenbine's triple.

Bobby Estalella, A's outfielder, hit safely in his fifteenth consecutive game.

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 28. The Palmetto Stable's Cuantos, an invader to this section from Aiken, S. C., had too much speed for five rivals today and won the Annefield Purse, featuring the Wednesday program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. The 6-year-old horse forged to the finish line two lengths in advance of a photo for second in which V. S. McClintock's Queen Minatoka was given the verdict over Mrs. W. S. McCabe's Rough Amos.

Favorite from the start of the betting, Cuantos in making it two straight over this track paid a $3.40 mutuell and was clocked in 1:27 3/5 over a fast track and before an estimated crowd of 3000.

Goes to Front

Jockey C. Coker, who came here with the Palmetto Stable, sent Cuantos to the front at once. The veteran set a good pace, followed by Rough Amos and Queen Minatoka. The leaders ran this way into the stretch. Cuantos was running easily when he shied in passing the starting gate on the side of the track and Coker was forced to go to the whip to make the favorite hold on. Queen Minatoka closed with a rush to take the place from the faltering Rough Amos.

The daily double payoff of $11.80 was one of the smallest of the meeting. W. C. Bell's Oddree was a runaway winner of the first event under Jockey Patsy Grant's handling. Apprentice Harry Hadry rode S. M. Follin's All Crystal to victory in the second.

G. E. Harris' Flower Battle made it two straight victories in the fourth race but had to survive a claim of foul. Frank Sheaffer, who rode Dicky into second money, registered the objection, claiming Flower Battle cut across the field at the first turn which appeared to be fact from where I sat. However, the patrol judge probably saw otherwise for the result was allowed to stand and Flower Battle paid $10.80.

Federal Diary

July 4 Holiday Appeal Ignored at White House

The attempt to get a holiday on July 4 for Federal employes has been ignored at the White House. However, no one will raise a fuss if the agencies are liberal in approving leave on Tuesday. The lucky people who get leave approved will get a holiday, as it can't be charged against either annual or sick leave . . . Roy Hendrickson, deputy director of UNRRA, has left for London, where he'll help set up the agency's British office . . . At the Smithsonian Instituteion yesterday, L. E. Commerford was elected employe representative on the board of review on efficiency ratings. His alternate is Jeremiah Collins . . . And at War Foods yesterday, Judge Marvin Jones who a year ago took what he thought would be a short leave of absence from the Federal bench to be food czar, celebrated his first birthday in the post. Even the skeptics agree he has done a good job in his quiet way.

WASHINGTON STORY: Seaman 3/c Robert Weeden, who had spent 21 months in the Pacific, landed the other day at a Virginia port and he began to hitchhike here to see his girl, a Federal worker. At Fredericksburg a nice gray-haired lady picked him up and brought him here. En route she told him she worked for PAW. In Washington, the sailor discovered his purse with $120 and all his papers were missing. And if he lost those papers, he was told before he left the ship, he'd have to spend 30 days in the brig. The seaman soon found out what PAW meant (Petroleum Administration for War) and he called the agency and told the personnel office all he knew, that the woman had gray hair and said she worked for PAW. The counselor there soon spotted Mrs. Ajelou Dinan, who had been in Virginia vacationing. Mrs. Dinan was called and she said she'd look for the purse in the car. She did and found it, and now Seaman Weeden is convinced that things can get done in wartime Washington.

Mordecai Ezekiel, who has been economic adviser to the Agriculture Secretary for years, will be transferred to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics on July 1. His present job will be abolished . . . Three generations of the same family are represented at War Manpower. Agnes Hladley, 63-year-old grandmother, is in the executive offices mail room; her daughter, Louise Hammond, is assistant chief of publications, and her granddaughter, Patsy, is working in the apprentice training service . . . Bob Farrington, an Agriculture lawyer, will conduct the investigation of Farm Credit for the Cooley Committee in the House. Incidentally, FCA appears to have a governor with backbone. Ivy Duggan was promised the job but some of the politicos tried to stop the appointment. The Democratic revolt in the south played into his hands as Duggan is a Southerner and the job was promised to him again—with strings on it, that he name two politicians as his deputies. Duggan refused and he was still made governor and one of his first acts was to abolish a job which the politicos sought to fill.

In the closing minutes of the recent session of Congress, Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee introduced three bills and Representative Rees of Kansas, ranking GOP member, a fourth which would bring about long-needed reforms in the Federal service. The bill of most interest to Federal workers would speed up automatic in-grade promotions from the present 18 and 30-month intervals to 12 and 18 months. Many Federal officials believe if this bill were enacted it would prove to be economical as it wouldn't be necessary to hand out grade promotions to keep employes on the job. The bill has the indorsement of the President and the Civil Service Commission.

However, Ramspeck said yesterday that he had introduced the bill at the request of the Civil Service Commission and that he hadn't had time to study it in detail, and he hadn't made up his mind to support it. Another Ramspeck bill would authorize all agencies to pay the transportation here of new employes. War and Navy do it now. The third bill would allow the Civil Service Commission to fix the salaries of new employes at any step within the grade. The bill, if enacted, would bring about pay raises for thousands of workers, as it's now the rule that employes must be started at the minimum of each grade. These bills will have potent support and hearings can be expected to be called by the committee reasonably soon.

The bill sponsored by Rees would lay down a Government wage policy for all to see that the salaries paid supervisors is not based on the number of people supervised. Strawbosses are often accused of building up their staffs to get their own salaries raised. The bill tells them they can't do that. . . . A few days like yesterday and the BSM (Brotherhood of Sensible Men) will get scores of converts. Already many employes have taken off the stiff collars and they're wearing cool slack suits to work. . . . The GOP platform hits at "loose personnel practices, confused lines of authority, duplication of effort, and an attitude of arrogance previously unknown in our history."

Fairfax Convict Camp To Move to Woodbridge

A special meeting of the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors was held yesterday to approve bills and complete routine business for the fiscal year ending June 30.

W. Frank Smith, State resident highway engineer, informed the board that State Convict Camp No. 13, near Fairfax, would be moved in the near future to a site at Woodbridge. The men will continue to work on Fairfax highways.

155 Graduated At Maryland U.

Spiritual qualities which men and women must possess if a nation is to be free were blotted out by "his generation," Roger J. Whiteford, Washington attorney, told 155 graduates of the University of Maryland at traditional commencement ceremonies held yesterday at College Park.

Asserting that his generation had lost ground spiritually in our determination to accomplish things, economic and social, Whiteford said, "Ours was a generation of power—sometimes properly used and at other times misused.

"Terrible as war is, I have a feeling that millions of our young men will come back better fitted for their jobs," declared Whiteford.

A belief that an intelligent, unbiased, free college graduate would provide the necessary leadership in the postwar years was expressed by Whiteford.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, presented diplomas to 111 College Park students and 44 to those from the Baltimore branch.

D. C. Area Flier Downed 3 Japs Near Palau

Three Japanese planes were blasted out of the air in 30 seconds in an engagement off Palau, in the southwest Pacific, on March 30 by squadron leader, Lieut. Comdr. Robert A. Winston, former Washingtonian, the Navy reported yesterday.

Commander Winston has written three books on aviation and numerous magazine articles. His wife, Mrs. Anne B. Winston, lives in Vienna, Va.

Named the "Meataxe," Commander Winston's squadron of Hellcats intercepted a formation of nine dive-bombers heading for an attack on their carrier. All nine enemy craft were shot down.

A division of three bombers became separated from the main group and Commander Winston attacked them. Starting with the plane nearest him, he poured .50-caliber slugs into one after another, each falling in flames after a quick burst.

"They hit the water very close together, leaving large oil slicks," a report of the action said. "All three planes were headed down in flames in less than 30 seconds."

While in pursuit of a fourth plane he scored another hit, but was forced to pull up when the Jap plane suddenly slowed down. A member of his squadron finished the plane off as it dived for one of the destroyers in the task force.

In all, the "Meataxe" squadron has shot down 21 Japanese planes without a single loss to themselves.

Dogs Should Bear Tags

With the quarantine of all vaccinated dogs in Montgomery County lifted, Otto W. Anderson, secretary of the county rabies control committee which recently sponsored inoculation of 10,000 pets against rabies, yesterday asked that owners have the vaccination tags securely attached to the animals.

Anderson pointed out that the tags are the chief means of identifying the animals in case they are picked up by dog catchers. The quarantine which was to have extended for a longer period was ordered lifted Tuesday by Dr. A. L. Brueckner, director of livestock sanitation for the Maryland Department of Agriculture. Dogs which have not been vaccinated must remain in quarantine for another 60 days.

Miss Triplett At 100 Sings And Chats

Her love for the Confederate cause resulted in her never marrying because "our boys were all in the service and I wouldn't marry a Yankee," Miss Florence Alexandria Triplett of 2610 South 11th st., Arlington, said yesterday at the observance of her 100th birthday.

A daughter of Hayward Foote Triplett and Mrs. Evaline Lewis Triplett, Miss Triplett rocked and sang, while "my 22 nephews and nieces and 6 great-great-nephews and nieces celebrated." She likes President Roosevelt's fireside chats, the news broadcasts and the Redskin football games on the radio.

Miss Triplett divides her time between her niece, Mrs. Caroline Lee Motlow of Arlington and a nephew, Robert Lee, at The Plains, Va.

Steps Taken by WMC to Save Private Employment Agencies

By Adele Bernstein

Cooperation between private employment agencies and the Washington War Manpower Commission was outlined by representatives of the two groups yesterday. Commercial agency spokesmen declared themselves "quite encouraged."

Chief features of the plan, expected to save the 20-odd private agencies in Washington from ruin after the new hiring controls go into effect Saturday, are as follows:

The Washington WMC is furnishing the agencies with priority lists from which they can make job referrals in the suggested order of "criticality."

Instead of checking placement of each seeker with U. S. Employment Service, the agencies will be able to deal directly with representatives on of the Washington Priorities Committee.

No referral-checking whatever will be necessary in the placement of part-time workers for jobs of seven days or less, youngsters of 17 years of age and under, and veterans during the first 60 days of civilian employment.

Agencies handling workers seeking domestic employment need not clear through USES at all where such placements are concerned.

Meeting yesterday with Ernest V. Connolly, Washington WMC director, were managers of Boyd's, Atlas, Adams, Personnel Service, Main Employment Services, and the National Negro Home Service Association.

Dr. Cake Takes Staten Island Medical Post

CAKE

Dr. Cake resigned at Gallinger following criticism by a congressional investigating committee because he said he could not continue to do his best work while his position "was subject to political interference and consideration."

At the time 54 employes in wards under his care protested recommendations by the Senate District subcommittee that he be dismissed. District Commissioners Guy Mason on Charles Kutz, as well as Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, acting superintendent of Gallinger, urged him not to resign.

Dr. Cake remained at Gallinger until May 4 due to the shortage of medical assistance there.

Finnish-American Group Applauds Procope's Ouster

Duluth, Minn., June 28 (AP).—A resolution condemning two members of Congress from Minnesota and one from Michigan, and praising the State Department's action in ousting Hjalmar Procope, Finnish minister to the United States, was adopted by more than 2000 persons of Finnish descent at the annual Finnish-American festival here Saturday and Sunday.

The festival was sponsored by the Finnish-American section of the International Workers Order.

The resolution stated that the group agreed with the action of the State Department and continued:

"With equal unanimity we condemn those Republicans in Congress, Michigan's Senator Arthur Vandenberg and Minnesota's Representatives Harold Knutson and William Pittenger, who have rallied behind the cause of fascist Finland and its dashing playboy minister, Hjalmar Procope. We are convinced that all patriotic Finnish-Americans will join with us in rebuking their nonsensical utterances."

Dime Standard Convention Tip, Bellhops Wail

Chicago, June 28.—Most "tips" are either a dime or a "thank you" was the wail yesterday among overworked bell hops at the Stevens, world's largest hotel and headquarters of the GOP convention.

"These guys must have learned something from professional baseball players," complained one, who said he had received only three "two bit" (25 cent) tips since Saturday night.

There is one one Santa Clause among the Stevens guests, however, who gave Vickie Meredith, a pretty elevator operator, a $50 bill. He was a "kindly, gray-haired gentleman," she confided.

3 Boys Get Dolph Awards For Services

Gochenour, 18, of 3245 P st. nw., an athlete, at Georgetown Branch, who will enter the Army Air Forces July 1; William Joseph McGeady, 17, of 315 18th st. se., shop foreman of Eastern Branch's print shop, and John "Butch" Meyers, 16, of 420 2nd st. nw., who filled in as a junior member of the physical department at Central Branch when the manpower shortage became acute there.

The watches were presented by A. F. E. Horn, a member of the board of trustees of the Boys Club and general manager of the General Electric Co. They represented the John Dolph Memorial Award established by a late Boys Club official.

Mrs. Dewey's Big Moment Yet to Come: Seeing Son; Party Liberal Is Defined

CHICAGO, JUNE 28.—The woman who never dreamed her boy might one day be a Presidential candidate—just hoped he would be a good boy"—said she felt as if she were, dreaming this morning when that mammoth placard parade for Thomas E. Dewey passed her box in convention stadium.

"It's exciting — enough" said pocket-sized Mrs. George Martin Dewey, mother of the White Hope of the Republican Party, as she attended her first political convention session. "Of course the biggest thrill for me will be when I see Tom."

She called him "Tom" that time. Sometimes its "Thomas" and then again its "Tommy" but by any name she chooses he is still the apple of her eye. She looks on the Presidency as "just a hard job," but she knows that if her boy gets it, he will handle it first rate. She is chatty and sweet; a typical American mother who obviously enjoys nothing more than talking about her offspring. . . . She likes people, bridge and needlework, but not politics. Dimples dent her cheeks as she smiles, and she smiles, often. She's an ardent church worker (Episcopalian).

She has spent all but six years of her life in the little Michigan town of Owosso, where both she and her only child were born. Like all wise women, she is reticent about divulging her birthdate. "Would she come to live in Washington if her son was elected?" She smiled again," "I might not be asked." Then she added, "Of course I'll be there some of the time, but I'll keep my home in Owosso."

LADY WITH NO LEISURE: Those dramatic pauses and well-placed intonations that had last night's convention session spell-bound during Clare Boothe Luce's speech didn't happen by accident. While most women delegates took refuge from the heat in air-conditioned hotel rooms and lobbies yesterday afternoon, La Luce was out in the sweltering stadium, rehearsing like nobody's business.

Friends and lackeys were spotted throughout the hall, suggesting that she raise her voice, or lower it; emphasize this phrase or that one, pause here and there to heighten the effect. She toiled tirelessly most of the afternoon; then appeared on the platform at the appointed time looking as if she had just stepped out of a cool bandbox. . . . "Probably been resting all day," snorted a toiling newspaper man, as she took the stand. Fact was, Mrs. Luce was the only person addressing the entire convention who took time out to rehearse her speech in the very spot where she delivered it.

CONVENTION CHATTER: The Stevens Hotel's biggest and best suite—with eight bedrooms—has been waiting for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey and members of their party for two days. Its plate-glass windows, taking over one entire wall, command a magnificent view of Lake Michigan and the strictly modern decor features pale wood and beige upholstery in muted stripes. . . . It was there that I first met Dewey's mother yesterday. Mrs. Dewey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Orla Hutt, Sapulpa, Okla., are there now.

For a few seconds out at the stadium this morning the hope that something would happen to relieve the cut and dried pattern of the convention looked as if it might bear fruit. The Bricker demonstration had outlasted the one for Tom Dewey by three minutes. "Is there a chance of an upset?" Mrs. James A. Farley asked a companion in her box. "Upset? You don't expect the Republicans to do anything like that, do you?"

In the Blackstone lobby earlier this morning Clarence Hewes, Washington, was recounting a conversation he had earlier with a New Dealer who happens to be here on business. "I notice," said the N. D., "that you Republicans aren't too enthusiastic about your candidate? Truth is, none of you seem to like him at all. Well, we hate ours."

Governor Bricker, smiling and waving his arms during the 11-minute demonstration after his name went before the convention this morning, must have known how another towering, gray-haired candidate felt in that same spot in 1940. . . . That convention—a Democratic one—was even more wildly enthusiastic for Paul V. McNutt; and like McNutt, Bricker had a difficult time shushing his supporters and "making the great sacrifice." Only difference was, Bricker at least got second place on the ticket.

"It's a great politician's convention," said a stocky Ohio delegate, as he dropped his Bricker placard and tore off his "B—A Bricker backer" badge in disgust. "He promised us he'd stay in there, and I don't mean for just Vice President." One thing I can say for Bricker—he had plenty of pin-up appeal.

POSTSCRIPTS: Gov. Dwight Griswold of Nebraska did a neat job of placing Dewey's name in nomination this morning, but his next political round may not be so pleasant. His opponent in the coming election, believe it or not, is a busboy in a munitions plant; was a janitor until two years ago; but he calls himself a mathematician and claims that he has found out how to square the circle, of all things.

Mrs. Warren Austin is one of the many GOP notables who will be more than glad to pack up and get out of Chicago. "I've made my own bed and cleaned my room ever since I've been here," she said. A tidy Vermont housekeeper,

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Pay Checks And Ballots

That woman's pocketbook nerve may be especially sensitive when she fills out her ballot next November seems to be well realized by the Republican Party. Its platform plank providing postwar opportunities open to men and women alike without discrimination in pay because of sex fits in very neatly with the present surmises of most postwar employment planners. They see not more than 3 million of the 18 million women now on payrolls withdrawing voluntarily when peace comes. In fact, William Haber, assistant executive director of the War Manpower Commission, predicts that only about 1,500,000, or about 8 per cent, will make such withdrawal.

Less is being heard these days about the once freely predicted stampede of women back to the kitchen. Also less is being heard about how employers are eagerly waiting the big moment when their temperamental women workers may be tossed out "bag and baggage." A recent survey by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor shows many large-scale employers eager to keep their women employes.

Would Retain Feminine Employes

One shipbuilder says 50 per cent of his women workers will want to keep their jobs and that he intends to employ them. A major telegraph company expects women to keep their jobs as operators. A large electrical company says a higher proportion of women will be needed in machine jobs. Such plans, of course, all presuppose giving returning servicemen their promised opportunities.

Women may cast possibly as high as 60 per cent of the ballots in the November election. Also the war may be far enough advanced at that time that they will be thinking seriously of their future pay checks. The Republican platform makers thus have been farsighted. The Democrats also are expected to do some wooing of women voters on the postwar job issue. But how far any party is able to carry out its promises in this line depends on future events—also perhaps on its own fundamental policy making.

If, as Mr. Haber points out, mass unemployment follows the war, economic fears will heighten prejudice against women workers on the part of employers. "Basic to women's employment fate is the state of the whole economy," he recently told the Women's Advisory Committee of WMP. "With fair employment conditions, women will hold their fair proportionate share."

Working Women's Election Stake

Women who must work for a living—and there will be increased numbers of them after the war—should realize that they have a deeper stake in both parties' platforms than a specific plank relating to themselves. It is of course important to them to know they will not be discriminated against in jobs or pay because they are women, but basically there must be jobs enough for them to go after, pay checks sizable enough to provide adequate standards of living.

Hence they will have to ask themselves in regard to any party's or any candidate's policy: How much does it offer toward building a permanent peace for the world? Is it geared toward an economy of abundance rather than a trafficking in scarcity? Is its goal the social welfare, personal freedom and self-expression of all citizens? Does it promote relations with other nations that would improve living standards for all peoples—and hence develop markets for our goods? Is it bold, creative, advancing, or cautious and static?

Whether they like it or not, women are going to have to go in for politics and economics more actively than they have in the past. They are going to have to read, study and discuss platforms and issues and give more careful thought to their ballots. It is no longer merely a matter of civic responsibility or noblesse oblige. It is a question of "Where do I eat and how?"

In Year Following Their Broken Engagement, Girl Hears Nothing From Man Until He Writes To Ask Return of His Ring; Isn't It Hers?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was engaged to a young fellow for two years, but due to a misunderstanding we decided to break our engagement. That was almost a year ago; and I hadn't heard a word from him since, until the other day when I received a short note from him requesting that I return his engagement ring immediately. Because the ring was given to me as a gift, I feel that it is mine, and I am very puzzled as to whether I should send it back or not. Can you tell me what I should do, so that everything will turn out for the best in the future? M. J. P.

DEAR M. J. P.: Technically, I suppose the ring belongs to you. It became your property when the man bestowed it upon you. However, to take that view is to construe possesion in terms of the "letter" of the transaction, and not in terms of the "spirit" of the transfer,—which, after all, strikes straight to the heart of the matter. What the ritual of engagement-ring-giving means is this: The man bestows and the girl receives and wears the ring as visible testimony to the world that they have verbally concurred in the intent to be married to each other.

When, as in your case, this purpose is set aside by mutual agreement at a later date, the girl's primary true justification for wearing the ring has ceased to exist. And with the nullification of that right, the ring should lose all value in her eyes; since, if she is a person of proper sensibilities, theoretically its principal value to her was its sentimental value, not its purchase price. Thus, her instinctive reaction should be to return it forthwith, if the engagement is broken, to the person to whom it presumably represents cash value, now that its sentimental value has evaporated. And this course of action is invariably followed by young women of good breeding and good faith, even though the man in their case may instruct them to keep it or throw it down the drain.

You have been greatly remiss in manners in keeping the ring until now. And the man is equally lacking in polish in bluntly notifying you to give it back. But you would be falling further from grace, stooping to the lowest order of vulgar haggling, if you declined to oblige his curt request. So my advice is: Send him the ring in the next mail, accompanied by a short note of formal apology for your oversight in neglecting to return it long ago. M. H.

Instance of Man's Incivility to Man

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You seem to have a lot of good old horse sense, as we say out West. I am new in Washington and have no close friends here with whom to talk things over, so I thought I would ask what you think about something that happened in our office recently. Having been turned down by both Army and Navy, I am doing war work for the Government, and if I do say so myself, I am doing it well. In appearance, I am not much to look at, being smallish, with yellow hair.

There is a big, rather good looking fellow in our office, who holds a Grade-3 job and is definitely short on gray matter; but he is full of conceit which he expresses by applying derisive nicknames to everybody else, especially the younger and smaller men with whom he works. His nickname for me is "Yellow." Some of the other fellows are addressed by him as "Crook," "Bum," 'Stoop," and "Tightwad." Nobody likes it. He has a mean streak in him, as everybody knows, but he pretends he's a jolly good fellow.

About a week ago, a new man was assigned to our office,—a little guy, smart as a whip, who just ignored the big fellow and went about his work as if he didn't see him. This was too much for Mr. Big; and yesterday, after he had said good morning to "Stoop," "Crook," "Tightwad," "Pee-Wee," etc., he turned to the newcomer and called him "Squirt." The little guy looked him over and repeated, "Squirt? Squirt? Why, you're the squirt of this outfit. Boys, meet Jumbo-Squirt, the squirty-squirt." Everybody howled; and since then, everybody calls him "Jumbo." He is furious and will hardly speak to anyone, but nobody cares. Don't you think he got what he deserved?

C. W. B.

One Philosopher's Rule of Behavior

DEAR C. W. B.: Let's say, rather, that Mr. Big got what he was asking for. "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." His habit of coarsely mauling the feelings of others was bound to result in a knockout kickback in kind, sooner or later. And there is poetic justice in the fact that a little guy finally told him off, in the presence of a group of his less-spunky victims.

Somebody ought to slip Mr. Big the following lines by Ralph Waldo Trine, to engrave on his mind and deeply study, as a guide to future dealings with his fellowman:

"Do you wish for kindness? Be kind?
Do you wish for truth? Be true!
What you give of love, you receive.
Your life is a reflex of you!"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

CHICAGO—ALTHOUGH DEWEY FORCES guarded the secret closely, they were so confident of victory in Chicago that they completed a detailed blueprint of the New York's Governor's entire political program for the summer and fall well before the convention convened.

Here's the strategy drawn up for the go-getting mustachioed gentleman from Albany: Spend the bulk of the summer in Albany preparing a series of six major addresses in which he will state his position on all questions. In these Dewey will assume the role he likes best, that of the people's district attorney, and will put the Roosevelt Administration on trial.

Dewey and Herbert Brownell, his personal campaign manager, have ruled out the traditional campaign train with its stumping of the country from end to end, visiting small towns and greeting the folks on their doorsteps. They point out that the country is so large, the candidate wears himself out trying to see and greet everyone, and ends up as Wendell Willkie did, meeting only a fraction of the folks.

Important Republican politicos will have a chance to see Dewey this summer, but many will trek to Albany for the opportunity. This does not mean Dewey will do no traveling. He plans to deliver his six speeches in carefully spotted cities around the country.

One major speech will take place in Michigan, another in California, a third in Minnesota, a fourth either in pivotal Kentucky or Tennessee. The last major speech will probably be delivered in New York City. On all these trips Dewey will make a few back-platform appearances, but, unlike Willkie's patient, plodding tours through the country, he will make no great circle swings of four or five weeks' duration.

Green at Scene

AFL's bulky Bill Green was a mighty disappointed man when he got a look at the Republican Convention's committee on labor. Green, who has been a bit cool on the Roosevelt family, had looked forward to a liberal GOP convention, where he and his labor buddies could throw their weight around.

However, Green got the surprise of his life when he walked into the committee room and found Senator Albert Hawkes of New Jersey, former vice president of the National Association of Manufacturers, dominating the labor committee. Bill Hutcheson, president of the powerful AFL carpenters' union and perennial chairman of GOP labor committees, tried to make things pleasant for Green, but the anti-union sentiments of the members got under Green's skin.

Emerging from the meeting, perspiring and unhappy, Green told intimates: "No matter what these fellows do or say, labor's going to be 80 per cent for Roosevelt in November."

Landon's Domestic Problem

WIVES of some of the most prominent politicos from all over the U. S. A. pitched in at the convention to make beds and answer telephones because of the acute Chicago hotel labor shortage. However, Mrs. Alf Landon was less worried about the help shortage than her youngsters are at home.

A few weeks ago, in Topeka, the children of the GOP 1936 Presidential nominee said they wanted to see an exhibition of aerial bombing which the Army was putting on to promote the sale of war bonds.

"If it's going to be dangerous to watch," the ex-Governor of Kansas said, "then we shouldn't go. If it's not dangerous, it won't be worth seeing."

"I don't care if it is dangerous, I want to see it," chimed in Landon's cute freckled-faced daughter, Nancy Joe.

But Mrs. Landon said that she was tired of all this war stuff.

"I want to live to see the day when we are finished with all this mess," she said.

To which Landon's young son Jackie replied: "I want to live to see the day when we get a maid so I won't have to do the dishes."

Byrd For V. P.

INSIDE STORY on that brief "Byrd for Vice President on the GOP ticket" boomlet, which momentarily stumped the convention, is that it was planted by New York Democrat John J. O'Connor, who was purged by FDR and is now a bitter leader of the anti-fourth-term drive in the Democratic Party. O'Connor met last week with Republican leaders in Chicago to help the GOP crack the Solid South.

Harrison Spangler and Congressman Harold Knutson of Minnesota thought that a Byrd boom by the Republicans would help convince Southern Democrats that the GOP is a lot closer to them spiritually than they realize. So O'Conor had some key Republicans tell the story to Joe Martin, minority leader of the House.

Martin agreed to the scheme. A Washington correspondent was tipped off to ask Martin how he would go for a Dewey-Byrd ticket, and Martin allowed as how he thought it would be fine. This set the ball rolling and the wires hummed to Chicago with the story.

However, Dewey advisers Ed Jaeckle and Russ Sprague turned emphatic thumbs down.

"If the Republican Party, with 26 fine Republican Governors and a host of members in the Senate and House, has to go into the opposition camp for its Vice Presidential candidate, then we'd better throw in the sponge right now," Jaeckle said.

NOTE—O'Connor and Martin had little hope of swinging the deal but thought it would help Byrd to go before the Democratic convention and point to his many friends in both parties.

Convention Chaff

WHEN DEWEY managers arrived here to set up headquarters, they were surprised to find young Reginald Headley, a Negro clerk, waiting to go to work for them. Headley had worked for the Dewey crowd during their unsuccessful 1940 preconvention drive and nobody had heard from him since. However, he just up and came to Chicago, ready to pitch in again for his hero . . . In 1940, Dewey had to listen to the convention voting from a window-sill in the Bellevue Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia. Something went wrong with his hotel room radio during the peak of the balloting and he had to hear as best he could from a loudspeaker hooked up in the street. This time it was different. Dewey had a beautiful portable radio hooked up in his Albany office . . .

Tonight (Thursday), politics or no politics, four executions are scheduled at Sing Sing. Dewey must keep himself available for any last-minute word from the warden at the State penitentiary. He'll probably do it by keeping a direct line open from Chicago to the warden's office, in case new evidence requires a reprieve . . . The three men who would normally become acting Governor in Dewey's absence— the lieutenant governor, the speaker of the assembly and the president pro tem of the Senate—all have been delegates in Chicago . . . Dewey leaders have no illusions about cracking the solid South. They concede it to FDR, will concentrate their fire on the rest of the Nation.

Dewey's Full Bus

FROM THE FIRST DAY of the convention, Dewey headquarters in the Stevens Hotel was jam-packed. Delegates arrived in waves, sounded out sentiment in the hotel lobbies, found Dewey was out in front, and made a bee-line for his headquarters.

One poor traveler got off the elevator at the crowded twenty-fifth floor and, smiling happily, was ready to join the Dewey forces. But taking one look at the crowd, he turned and walked away, sighing sadly: "I guess the bus is full."

Chicago Merry. Go-Round

THE BRICKER-FOR-PRESIDENT crowd pulled out all the stops when it came to inventing tricky trappings to attract attention. In addition to having a big brass band, Brickerites wore campaign buttons, campaign hats, campaign feathers, special campaign shirts, carried Bricker picket signs, beautiful three-color literature, special Bricker stationery, and even special parasols to protect lady delegates from the sun . . . Wise-cracked one Bricker rooter as he emerged from the Bricker headquarters:

"They gave me everything but a new suit." . . . Dewey headquarters supplied few gadgets to boosters. Neither did members of the Warren and Stassen campaign committees. . . . Jim Selvage, GOP publicity chief, is resigning at the end of this month. Dewey will select his own man.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER

Adventists Act 'To Destroy Drink Curse'

A program "to destroy the dreadful curse of drink" was adopted yesterday by the Potomac Conference of Senventh-day Adventists which comprises 58 churches in the District, Virginia and western Maryland.

The program, adopted at the annual conference convention in Takoma Park, Md., says: "As a people we stand together as one against use of alcoholic beverages and tobacco in every form, and pledges them "to do all in our power by voice, pen and vote to prohibit and restrict the sale and use of alcoholic beverages.

"It adds that we favor passage of Senate bill 860 and H-R 2082 which bills propose to prohibit the sale of liquor near army camps are now pending in the United States Senate and House-aiming to protect our military forces for the duration of the war from ravages and corruption influenced by intoxicating beverages.

It also pledges, "to do all in our power to circulate temperance literature setting forth the evils of alcohol," and to arouse the public conscience to the liquor menance which threatens the welfare and safety of society."

Withers Spiritual Life

The program added that science has proved"beyond question that alcohol when taken in any quantity" is a narcotic poison, injurious to health, habit forming and is debasing to moral character and withering to the spiritual life.

The liquor traffic, the leaders agreed, is one of the most "corrupting and debauchin, influences in the world."

Speaking on "God's Memorial of Creation" at last night's meeting, the Rev. Charles T. Everson, New York evangelist, said the early Christian Church kept "Saturday the seveith day Sabbath for centuries after Christ." Ethiopia, he declared, "kept Saturday as Sabbath for over 1500 years and still regards the day as sacred according to Isaih-66, verse 20.

"Who changed the Sabbath from Saturday to Sunday" will be discussed tonight at 8 by the Rev. R. S. Fries, Boston, Mass.

U. S. Scrolls Honor Leningrad, Stalingrad

Scrolls to Leningrad and Stalingrad, saluting their historic fights against the Nazis, have been presented to Marshal Stalin by the United States Government, President Roosevelt said yesterday.

He told his news conference the scrolls were presented in Moscow by Ambassador Harriman. They bear the signature of President Roosevelt and were accompanied by a letter from the President to Premier Stalin, saying that "I hope that in presenting these scrolls to the two cities you will see fit to convey to their citizens my own personal expressions of friendship and admiration and my hope that our people will continue to develop that close understanding which has marked our common effort."

SYMBOLS OF DEMOCRACY

Although familiarly known as the "Kentucky Rifle," this famous "shootin' iron" was first made in this country by the Pennsylvania Dutch who brought the art of rifling with them from Europe.

THE KENTUCKY RIFLE

It was the superior accuracy of the rifle as developed by American ingenuity and skill . . . by free men in free democratic enterprise that played a leading part in freeing this country from European dominance, and the winning of the West. It was the same "rifle accuracy" in achieving the same high standard of flavor that made possible the leadership of Senate Beer in a no less typically American field.

Listen to the Senate Beer News Reporter—Ken Evans—six times daily on WMAL—7 a.m., 12 Noon, 4 p.m., 6 p.m., 11 p.m., and 12 M.

Senate BEER

In 12-oz. and Quart Bottles

Along with the art of rifling, came the art of brewing finer beers, but the product was not always uniform. American ingenuity applied mass production and standardized accuracy to brewing as it did the production of rifles of uniform perfection. The small bubble carbonation . . . the locked-in flavor process of the Christian Heurich Brewing Co. . . . ensures that every bottle of Senate will be identical in beer goodness with the last. For that beer, thirst, say Senate first.
